WHEY BUTTER BILL TO COME UP WEDNESDAY

ASSEMBLYMAN OLSON WOULD REPEAL LAW LABELING PRODUCT; CLAIMS IT'S AS GOOD AS STANDARD BUTTER

Madison, Wis., Feb. 21.—Whey butter will have its inning before the legislature on Wednesday at a joint hearing of the senate state affairs committee and the assembly committee on agriculture. Consideration will be given the bill of Assemblyman William Olson to abolish the law requiring that whey butter be labelled, starting a fight that has occupied the time and attention of previous legislatures for years.

Require Stamp Now

The present statute prohibits any person from selling or having in his possession with intent to sell, any butter made either in whole or in part from whey cream, without having all of the butter stamped. This results in a big loss to Wisconsin producers, according to Assemblyman Olson, who claims that the whey product is fully equal to that made from whole cream.

"Two years ago we had a tub of whey butter and crackers here for the legislators to eat to convince them of the quality of the product," Assemblyman Olson said. "They ate the butter, commented on what a splendid taste it had, and then went in and voted down the measure which would have permitted its sale without being penalized.

Destroys Confidence

"The effect of this labelling is like a man 'convict' or a dog 'sheep-killer.' It destroys the confidence of the people in the product and lowers its value."

Senator Bilgrien, a member of the senate state affairs committee, will oppose Olson in his contentions. He says that the move to have labels removed is a step toward licensing poor quality and a cheap product, so that it can be sold on the same plane with the real whole cream butter for which Wisconsin is noted.

Previous sessions have taken up days of discussion on the labelling question, the decision always being in favor of labels. This year Assemblyman Olson says that he is sure the members will be convinced of the mistake they are making.

Wants Shorter Sessions

Senator Roethe of Fennimore, has gained fame in the legislature for his suggestions for shortening the session. Although a member of the senate for three terms he has never introduced a bill, and has explained his intention of following his past policy.

As chairman of the state affairs committee he has established a record for killing bills which cannot show good cause for existence. His printed suggestions to all those appearing before the committee to "be brief, speak to the point, don't repeat," have attracted attention. Senator Roethe has occupied the president's chair several times during the session, having been chosen by the members in the absence of president pro-tem Timothy Burke.

LEGION'S OUT TO HELP MEN HURT IN WAR

KEYNOTE OF MARSHFIELD MEETING IS "TAKE CARE OF DISABLED VETERANS"; LANDIS GIVES TALK

"Take care of the disabled veterans who were injured during the war," was the keynote sounded at the gathering of Legion men from every part of Wisconsin at Marshfield Saturday and Sunday, when national officers of the organization spoke and Judge K. M. Landis addressed the men present. Among the local ex-service men who attended the meeting were: Com. F. X. Pomainville, Adj. W. C. Wierick, Chester Severance, Frank Lynn, Henry Mosher, Fred Ragan, Roy Kruck, Chas. Nash, Dr. Merrill, Wm. Binneboose and Edw. Smith.

More than one thousand former service men were present Sunday morning to hear an address by Federal Judge K. M. Landis. He thrilled his audience when he declared that if he had the power he would turn loose five army corps of useless government employes and get rid of an enormous amount of soldier correspondence, the value of which as paper exceeds the total of the claims made.

Backs Legion Plan

Judge Landis declared that the legion bill to centralize authority in regard to former service men under one responsible head would be effective and that it was selfish on the part of civilians not to stand by former service men in need of medical attention. He added that he was sorry that he was not eligible to membership in the legion as he would treasure such a privilege and offered to assist the body in every way in his power.

Declaring that civilian sacrifice during the war consisted mainly of giving up bacon for breakfast, Judge Landis said that the present situation was similar to that which followed the civil war when it was most difficult to get thru congress bills that recognized the duty which the country owed to soldiers who had been wounded. He said that if the job was not done by legion men it would not be done. He asserts that "pin heads, two bytours and deuces and trays in public affairs" sneer at the legion because of its accomplishments.

Refers to Dial

In reference to his recent dispute with United States Senator Dial, the judge said that he was not worried "for Dial has taken his troops and retired to a quiet sector." He added that if no action had been taken by March 4, he would himself ask for an investigation of Dial's charges by the senate.

In relation to the attack made by Representative Welty, who charged that Landis was trying to get laws passed by the legislature of Illinois, the judge stated that he was trying to have it made a felony for ball players to bet on games and said that there must be no betting or bribery in the game. He asserted that he felt that he was lucky in drawing the men he did as his enemies.

In the afternoon session, addresses were delivered by Lemuel G. Bolles, national adjutant, National Vice Commander Emery of Michigan, and State Commander McCauley of Illinois. The meeting closed with a general resolve to increase legion membership in Wisconsin to 50,000 before July 1.

La Crosse Wis. Feb. 19—La Crosse school children are early initiated into the mysteries of the city government. Members of the civics classes attend meetings of the Common Council and make a thorough study of the city budget. This is the kind of teaching the schools can give to make good American citizens the school board officials point out.

LOOKS OVER PAVILION

HAVE TRAFFIC COPS IN JANESVILLE SCHOOL

Janesville, Wis., Feb. 21—A rigid system of traffic rules which resembles a busy city is now in force in the high school here to cope with the congested conditions of the halls between classes.

The system is the plan of Principal George Passford. Yellow chalk is used to direct the pupils in various directions. On the stairway arrows indicate the direction and on which side one must travel. The main congestion occurs in going in and out of the main room on the second floor. Signs of "Stop", confront one as he approaches to enter. The main room is emptied before any student is allowed to enter. In this way a scrimmage among 800 pupils in a building built for 200 is partially remedied.

NEKOOSA WOMAN POSTMISTRESS

RELIEVE NEKOOSA EDITOR OF POSITION; SEEK PERMANENT APPOINTMENT FOR MRS. H. H. HELKE

Mrs. H. H. Helke, prominent and well known Nekoosa woman, has been named for temporary postmistress of the Nekoosa postoffice. Mrs. Helke took charge of the post office on Saturday night and will hold the position until a permanent selection has been made for the position. The vacancy was caused by the action of Inspector Niles of the postoffice department who came to Nekoosa several days ago to inspect the office, he having relieved Leon G. Schaar, of the position. No charges were made.

Seek Mrs. Helke's Appointment

It is understood that Mrs. H. H. Helke who has temporary charge of the office will receive the backing of the big majority of the people of Nekoosa for the permanent appointment of the office and efforts are being made to secure her appointment as she is worthy of the place and is an efficient and careful manager of affairs, having had experience in several lines of work.

Made No Explanation

Inspector Niles, whose home is in Necedah, has returned to that city without making any explanation of the change of the post office management. It is not known why the change was made and the announcement that Mrs. Helke would take charge of the office was a surprise to the people of Nekoosa.

The Tribune attempted to get in touch with Mr. Schaar over the telephone but was unable to reach him as it was said he was in Necedah.

Mr. Schaar, who is also editor of the Nekoosa Tribune, has held the position of Postmaster there for about a year and a half, having received his appointment a year ago last November.

BUSY PROF.'S DAY TO OPEN AT SIX-THIRTY

Milton, Wis., Feb. 21.—Early morning classes hold no terrors for Milton college students—at least they have submitted meekly to Prof. H. M. Barbour's announcement that his economic class will meet three days a week this semester at 6:30 a. m.

"I hate to do it," the professor told his class with a smile, "but, well-er-it's a case of Hopkin's choice, I guess. With conflicting classes every other hour of the day, a 6:30 recitation is our only alternative."

During the past semester the earliest class period on the schedule was at 7:30 a. m.

Frank Lynn was urged to become a candidate for the office by a number of his friends who are ex-soldiers and it is expected that he will be endorsed by the American Legion Post of this city. A number of the officials and members are supporting his candidacy at the present time. Frank is a disabled veteran of the World War and an appeal will be made by his friends here to the powers at Washington, basing his qualifications on the fact that he was disabled while in the service and is entitled to recognition on this ground.

Mr. Lynn contracted pleurisy while serving in the army and since his release from the service has been suffering with chronic pleurisy which makes it impossible for him to do heavy work.

Other Candidates Strong

Mr. Nixon will be a strong candidate in the field, he having been connected with the local postoffice for the past ten years as city carrier. Mr. Nixon's father served for fifty-six years in the postal department at Washington. Mr. Nixon is a close personal friend of Con. E. E. Browne, who has considerable control over the appointment to the local office.

Edw. Lipke will also be a strong candidate in the field, he being a leader in labor activities and having a great many friends in the city who will back him. His fair dealings in labor matters has given him a wide acquaintance both in this city and other cities.

HAVE HEAVY BLIZZARD THRU EASTERN STATES

(By Associated Press)

Washington, Feb. 21 — Although the blizzard which Saturday night and yesterday swept the Eastern states from western Tennessee to the northeast had passed out of sea, the big area is still in the grip of ice and snow.

In many places particularly around New York where the storm was the worst and in some parts of Virginia Maryland and Pennsylvania where snow had fallen in great drifts, the inhabitants literally had to dig themselves out.

Many districts have not been heard from and the list of those who lost their lives has not been definitely fixed, although it has been definitely established that nine deaths occured in New York.

LANDIS BUSY TRYING CASES

PLEAD GUILTY BUT JUDGE WON'T ACCEPT HIS WORD; WAUSAU MEN TO BE TRIED FOR THEFT OF MEAT

(By Associated Press)

La Crosse, Wis. Feb. 21—Harry Muldoon, alias Harry Cooper, alias Harry Moran, alias Harry Moore plead guilty before Judge Landis this morning in supreme court on charges of having forged a money order at Ashland, but stated that he did not raise it from $6 to $60.

Don't Accept Plead

"Your plea of guilty cannot be accepted, because of your statement," Judge Landis stated, "and an attorney will have to be appointed to defend you."

Mouldoon was arrested as he stepped out of Leavenworth Prison after serving a term for the same offense and has been in jail since August 21.

Wausau Men Up

Joseph Gussman and Joseph Sunday of Marathon county are on trial on a charge of having in their possesion meat stolen from a shipment sent by the Armour & Co., from St. Paul to Green Bay. The meat was stolen from a Northwestern freight car between Eland Junction and Wausau on September 7, 1920.

The meat was found near the home of Gussman on the night of September 10. There were 130 pounds of bacon. Gussman told officers that Sunday had stolen fresh meat, which was also later found. Gussman told the officers that he had purchased the meat valued at $258 from two persons for $15.

Have Busy Term

"There will not be any easy loafing time for you gentlemen, like there was last month," stated Judge Landis. As he looked over his calendar and saw a number of interstate shipment cases and several others listed for trial he stated, "Prepare for night sessions gentlemen."

Judge Landis plans to work three days and three nights trying cases on Thursday will impose sentence on all persons convicted during this term in court.

LEGION'S OUT TO HELP MEN HURT IN WAR

KEYNOTE OF MARSHFIELD MEETING IS "TAKE CARE OF DISABLED VETERANS"; LANDIS GIVES TALK

"Take care of the disabled veterans who were injured during the war," was the keynote sounded at the gathering of Legion men from every part of Wisconsin at Marshfield Saturday and Sunday, when national officers of the organization spoke and Judge K. M. Landis addressed the men present. Among the local ex-service men who attended the meeting were: Com. F. X. Pomainville, Adj. W. C. Wierick, Chester Severance, Frank Lynn, Henry Mosher, Fred Ragan, Roy Kruck, Chas. Nash, Dr. Merrill, Wm. Binneboose and Edw. Smith.

More than one thousand former service men were present Sunday morning to hear an address by Federal Judge K. M. Landis. He thrilled his audience when he declared that if he had the power he would turn loose five army corps of useless government employes and get rid of an enormous amount of soldier correspondence, the value of which as paper exceeds the total of the claims made.

Backs Legion Plan

Judge Landis declared that the legion bill to centralize authority in regard to former service men under one responsible head would be effective and that it was sellish on the part of civilians not to stand by former service men in need of medical attention. He added that he was sorry that he was not eligible to membership in the legion as he would treasure such a privilege and offered to assist the body in every way in his power.

Declaring that civilian sacrifice during the war consisted mainly of giving up bacon for breakfast, Judge Landis said that the present situation was similar to that which followed the civil war when it was most difficult to get thru congress bills that recognized the duty which the country owed to soldiers who had been wounded. He said that if the job was not done by legion men it would not be done. He asserts that "pin heads, two by fours and deuces and trays in public affairs" sneer at the legion because of its accomplishments.

Refers to Dial

In reference to his recent dispute with United States Senator Dial, the judge said that he was not worried "for Dial has taken his troops and retired to a quiet sector." He added that if no action had been taken by march 4, he would himself ask for an investigation of Dial's charges by the senate.

In relation to the attack made by Representative Welty, who charged that Landis was trying to get laws passed by the legislature of Illinois, the judge stated that he was trying to have it made a felony for ball players to bet on games and said that there must be no betting or bribery in the game. He asserted that he felt that he was lucky in drawing the men he did as his enemies.

In the afternoon session, addresses were delivered by Lemuel G. Dolles, national adjutant, National Vice Commander Emery of Michigan, and State Commander McCauley of Illinois. The meeting closed with a general resolve to increase legion membership in Wisconsin to 50,000 before July 1.

STUDY CITY GOV'T

La Crosse Wis. Feb. 19—La Crosse school children are early initiated into the mysteries of the city government. Members of the civics classes attend meetings of the Common Council and make a thorough study of the city budget. This is the kind of teaching the schools can give to make good American citizens, the school board officials point out.

LOOKS OVER PAVILION

Joe Hanus, a merchant of Hatfield, was in the city Saturday inspecting the Street Railway Pavilion. He expects to erect a similar one this season on Lake Arbutus. While here Mr. Hanus arranged to represent the Mott & Wood Co. and the Grand Rapids Milling Co. in his locality.

The Boy Scout Bugle Corps will meet for instruction under the direction of Mr. Jeffers, at the Local Scout Headquarters tonight at 7:30 o'clock. All scouts who have bugles, either of their own or the property of the Bugle Corps are requested to report at that time and place.

HAVE TRAFFIC COPS IN JANESVILLE SCHOOL

Janesville, Wis., Feb. 21—A rigid system of traffic rules which resembles a busy city is now in force in the high school here to cope with the congested conditions of the halls between classes.

The system is the plan of Principal George Passford. Yellow chalk is used to direct the pupils in various directions. On the stairway arrows indicate the direction and on which side one must travel. The main congestion occurs in going in and out of the main room on the second floor. Signs of "Stop", confront one as he approaches to enter. The main room is emptied before any student is allowed to enter. In this way a scrimmage among 800 pupils in a building built for 300 is partially remedied.

RELIEVE NEKOOSA EDITOR OF POSITION; SEEK PERMANENT APPOINTMENT FOR MRS. H. H. HELKE

Mrs. H. H. Helke, prominent and well known Nekoosa woman, has been named for temporary postmistress of the Nekoosa postoffice. Mrs. Helke took charge of the post office on Saturday night and will hold the position until a permanent selection has been made for the position. The vacancy was caused by the action of Inspector Niles of the postoffice department who came to Nekoosa several days ago to inspect the office, he having relieved Leon G. Schaar, of the position. No charges were made.

Seek Mrs. Helke's Appointment

It is understood that Mrs. H. H. Helke who has temporary charge of the office will receive the backing of the big majority of the people of Nekoosa for the permanent appointment of the office and efforts are being made to secure her appointment as she is worthy of the place and is an efficient and careful manager of affairs, having had experience in several lines of work.

Made No Explanation

Inspector Niles, whose home is in Neceidah, has returned to that city without making any explanation of the change of the post office management. It is not known why the change was made and the announcement that Mrs. Helke would take charge of the office was a surprise to the people of Nekoosa.

The Tribune attempted to get in touch with Mr. Schaar over the telephone but was unable to reach him as it was said he was in Neceidah.

Mr. Schaar, who is also editor of the Nekoosa Tribune, has held the position of Postmaster there for about a year and a half, having received his appointment a year ago last November.

BUSY PROF.'S DAY TO OPEN AT SIX-THIRTY

Milton, Wis., Feb. 21.—Early morning classes hold no terrors for Milton college students—at least they have submitted meekly to Prof. H. M. Barbour's announcement that his economic class will meet three days a week this semester at 6:30 a. m.

"I hate to do it," the professor told his class with a smile. "but, well-er-it's a case of Hopkin's choice, I guess. With conflicting classes every other hour of the day, a 6:30 recitation is our only alternative."

During the past semester the earliest class period on the schedule was at 7:30 a. m.

THREE MORE WANT TO BE POSTMASTER

FRANK LYNN BEING PUSHED BY SERVICE MEN FOR JOB; EDW. LIPKE AND GEO. T. NIXON ENTER FIELD

Three more entrants into the field as candidates for the appointment as postmaster in this city were announced on Monday when the former service men put Frank Lynn's name into the field as their candidate, Geo. T. Nixon entered as a candidate and papers were being circulated for Edw. Lipke. All of the candidates are well known in the city and receiving support from their friends for the office.

Is Disabled Soldier

Frank Lynn was urged to become a candidate for the office by a number of his friends who are ex-soldiers and it is expected that he will be endorsed by the American Legion Post of this city. A number of the officials and members are supporting his candidacy at the present time. Frank is a disabled veteran of the World War and an appeal will be made by his friends here to the powers at Washington, basing his qualifications on the fact that he was disabled while in the service and is entitled to recognition on this ground.

Mr. Lynn contracted pleurisy while serving in the army and since his release from the service has been suffering with chronic pleurisy which makes it impossible for him to do heavy work.

Other Candidates Strong

Mr. Nixon will be a strong candidate in the field, he having been connected with the local postoffice for the past ten years as city carrier. Mr. Nixon's father served for fifty-six years in the postal department at Washington. Mr. Nixon is a close personal friend of Con. E. E. Browne, who has considerable control over the appointment to the local office.

Edw. Lipke will also be a strong candidate in the field, he being a leader in labor activities and having a great many friends in the city who will back him. His fair dealings in labor matters has given him a wide acquaintance both in this city and other cities.

TAKE TRUCK LOADED WITH OLD STYLE BEER

Racine, Wis.—Eight barrels and 30 cases of 4-per cent beer, bound from Port Washington to Kenosha, fill two large cells in the county jail while a motor truck used in hauling the beer is in a local garage.

The seizure was made after the sheriff and deputies had followed the beer runners from Milwaukee county into Racine county.

CANADIAN PROGRESS

Canada, our neighbor to the north, has been steadily and constantly forging ahead. A land of wilderness of yesterday and a land of vast untouched natural resources is today building her commerce to a basis which is becoming competitive with the United States. Within the last few years Canada has developed to an extent that would startle the casual observer if he had not made any study of the advancement of our neighbor.

The war gave impulse to the Canadian shipbuilding industry to the extent that the Dominion of Canada now has a merchant marine, which is seventh in the world and which in comparison to the United States before the war is of considerable high rank. Canada with a merchant marine stands in a fair way to rival the United States in no small degree in many of the products common to both countries, which means that the countries of the western hemisphere find themselves in close competition for world trade.

A strong Canadian commercial program supplementing the British trade supremacy makes an almost impregnable defense for the United Kingdom, which the United States will have to buck in the foreign trade game.

SULLIVAN KNOCKS THOMAS IN THIRD

Boston—Jack (Twin) Sullivan, of Cambridge, 42 years old, Saturday night won over Joe Thomas of Diamond Hill, R. I., 35 years old, by a technical knockout, when the referee stopped the bout in the third round. It was a return boxing bout, sequel to a ten round draw fought in Los Angeles thirteen years ago. The match was scheduled for ten rounds, but Sullivan despatched his man in the third.

Referee George Freeman, himself a veteran boxer, stopped the bout after it became evident that Thomas had little chance against Sullivan.

Sullivan opened a cut above his opponent's eye in the first round and followed up this lead with successive jabs to the wound. He showered short right and left jabs to the body that bothered Thomas considerably, and the end came when he was practically at Sullivan's mercy.

MAY NOT ASK LOCAL TEAM

LOOKING UP RECORDS OF CENTRAL WISCONSIN TEAMS WHICH MIGHT BE ENTERED IN ST. POINT TOURNEY

The Lincoln high school basket ball team of this city may not get an invitation to attend the tournament at Stevens Point this year according to the Journal, which states that Coach Swetland is looking up the records of the various teams with a view of picking these classes. Speaking of the tournament the Journal says:

"Eight highschool basket ball teams of central Wisconsin which have established the best records for the season in the opinion of high school officials will meet in Stevens Point on March 10, 11, and 12 in the annual inter-scholastic tournament conducted under the Normal school auspices.

"Rhinelander appears to be a team of exceptional strength from which little has been heard locally up to the time. With a string of victories, the quintet representing that city [illegible] defeated Antigo on Tuesday night. Antigo has previously claimed Wisconsin river valley honors. Both these teams will probably be contenders for honors here. The local Highs, with a record of five victories and three defeats are said to have a good chance to be selected, with the Marshfield game at Marshfield this week-end either insuring their entrance or possibly making it doubtful. Other teams which must be given consideration as possible contenders for district honors here are Medford, Wausau, Westfield, New London, Portage and Marion. It appears likely that Wisconsin Rapids, Marshfield or Waupaca will be invited. Waupaca and Monticello are represented by fairly strong teams but to date their record of games has not been received.

"Preliminary letters have been sent out by Coach J. E. Swetland asking the teams of this district to send in their season's record. From this list the eight making the best showing will be chosen and invited to participate in the tournament for the Wisconsin honors.

Perforation of Postage Stamps.

Forty-six perforations are made around the edge of every postage stamp. It is estimated that about 500,000,000 holes are punched every day. This means a similar number of bits of paper. They are collected, repulped and remade into sheets of paper. These are regarded so valuable by the postal authorities that barrels full of them are sold every day.

Give a Thought to the Living.

It is remarkable how few of us ever think that angels may be entertained unawares, that the misfit may be the one who is in time to immortalize his name and cast luster on the country of his birth or adoption. It may be all right to canonize the great when they are dead, but it is sad to think how few of them have been appreciated while alive.—Exchange.

The war gave impulse to the Canadian shipbuilding industry to the extent that the Dominion of Canada now has a merchant marine, which is seventh in the world and which in comparison to the United States before the war is of considerable high rank. Canada with a merchant marine stands in a fair way to rival the United States in no small degree in many of the products common to both countries, which means that the countries of the western hemisphere find themselves in close competition for world trade.

A strong Canadian commercial program supplementing the British trade supremacy makes an almost impregnable defense for the United Kingdom, which the United States will have to buck in the foreign trade game.

SPEAKER SIGNS 36 FOR SPRING TRAINING TRIP

WILL TAKE SEVENTEEN PITCHERS ON INITIAL CRUISE; OPEN SEASON WEEK EARLIER THAN USUAL

Cleveland, O., Feb. 21.—Thirty-six players have been ordered by Tris Speaker, manager of the world's champion Cleveland Americans, to report for spring training at Dallas, Texas, next month. In addition to these, two others will report after they finish their college terms.

The first squad, including the pitchers and catchers, will start for the training camp Feb. 26, one week earlier than had been anticipated. The other players will report about March 5.

Seventeen Pitchers

Seventeen pitchers are on the Indians' roster. They include Stanley Coveleskie, James Bagby, Ray Caldwell, John W. Mails, George Uhle, Robert Clark, Guy Morton, Jess Petty, Ted Odenwald, George Cykowski, H. L. Kimes, C. C. Hamilton and G. R. Ellison. The newcomers are; Nelson A. Pott, a left hander, who last season played in Charleston, Miss., and J. C. Edwards, another southpaw, last season with Belzoni, Miss., in the Delta League; Lask Lindsey, who wore a Yazoo, Miss., uniform in the Delta League last summer; B. Henderson with Hope, Ark., in the same league, last season and C. C. Hamilton a product of the University of Iowa. The latter three are righthanders. Henderson probably will not report until he is graduated in June. Steve O'Neill, Leslie G. Numaker and Chester D. Thomas comprise the catching staff.

The infielders are Wheeler Johnston, George Burns and Louis Guisto, for first base; Bill Wambsganss, second base; Joe Sewell, shortstop; Larry Gardner, third base; Harry Lunte, utility and J. R. Stevenson, a University of Alabama student utility. Stevenson will report about about June.

Veteran Outfielders

Speaker, Elmer Smith, Jack Graney, Charlie Jamieson, Joe Evans and Joe Woods are the veteran outfielders. Others are Arthur Jeanes, of Maypearl, Tex., a semi-pro.

SULLIVAN KNOCKS THOMAS IN THIRD

Boston—Jack (Twin) Sullivan, of Cambridge, 42 years old, Saturday night won over Joe Thomas of Diamond Hill, R. I., 35 years old, by a technical knockout, when the referee stopped the bout in the third round. It was a return boxing bout, sequel to a ten round draw fought in Los Angeles thirteen years ago. The match was scheduled for ten rounds, but Sullivan despatched his man in the third.

Referee George Keenan, himself a veteran boxer, stopped the bout after it became evident that Thomas had little chance against Sullivan.

Sullivan opened a cut above his opponent's eye in the first round and followed up this lead with successive jabs to the wound. He showered short right and left jabs to the body that bothered Thomas considerably, and the end came when he was practically at Sullivan's mercy.

MAY NOT ASK LOCAL TEAM

LOOKING UP RECORDS OF CENTRAL WISCONSIN TEAMS WHICH MIGHT BE ENTERED IN ST. POINT TOURNEY

The Lincoln high-school basket ball team of this city may not get an invitation to attend the tournament at Stevens Point this year according to the Journal, which states that Coach Swetland is looking up the records of the various teams with a view of picking those eligible. Speaking of the tournament the Journal says:

"Eight highschool basket ball teams of central Wisconsin which have established the best records for the season in the opinion of Normal school officials will meet in Stevens Point on March 10, 11, and 12 in the annual inter-scholastic tournament conducted under the Normal school auspices.

"Rhinelander appears to have a team of exceptional strength but from which little has been heard locally up to this time. With a long string of victories, the quintet representing that city decisively defeated Antigo on Tuesday night. Antigo has previously claimed Wisconsin river valley honors. Both these teams will probably be contenders for honors here. The local Highs, with a record of five victories and three defeats are said to have a good chance to be selected, with the Marshfield game at Marshfield this week-end either insuring their entrance or possibly making it doubtful. Other teams which must be given consideration as possible contenders for district honors here are Medford, Wausau, Westfield, New London, Portage and Marion. It appears likely that Wisconsin Rapids, Marshfield or Waupaca will be invited. Weyauwega and Montello are represented by fairly strong teams but to date their record of games has not been received.

"Preliminary letters have been sent out by Coach J. E. Swetland asking the teams of this district to send in their season's record. From this list the eight making the best showing will be chosen and invited to participate in the tournament for central Wisconsin honors.

Forty-six perforations are made around the edge of every postage stamp. It is estimated that about 500,000,000 holes are punched every day. This means a similar number of bits of paper. BEE KEEPERS ASKING HELP

WANT $10,000 TO FIGHT FOUL BROOD AMONG APIARIES IN EASTERN PART OF WISCONSIN; RELATE WORK DONE

Madison, Wis. Feb. 21—Bee keepers and representatives of the state department of agriculture appeared before the joint finance committee Thursday afternoon to ask more state aid to eradicate and control the American foul brood, which Wisconsin, and thereby create a severe loss to farmers depending upon their bees for a considerable portion of their income.

Tells Of Work

F. C. Fracker of the ethnological bureau of the department of agriculture, presented the committee with the results of the work already accomplished in exterminating the foul brood, which is a contageous disease [illegible] honey bees.

[illegible] in the eastern part [illegible] resolved the extension department, he stated [illegible] for an appropriation of [illegible] complete the work, at the [illegible] extending to two more [illegible] The loss to Wisconsin each [illegible] because of the disease is estimated at between $100,000 and [illegible] 5,200,000 pounds valued at $1,250,000 the committee was told. Counties in the north central part of the state have requested that steps be taken to block the progress of the foul brood for this reason an appropriation greater than the yearly amount of $5,000 now granted, is needed, Mr. Fracker said.

The sum of $500 per year per county for a period of four years is required to eradicate the disease, it is claimed.

N. E. France, of the Pittsville normal school, presented the committee with information regarding the spread of the disease. The honey of an infected colony of bees is stolen by healthy ones, who become infected from it he said.

Bee keepers presented their case to the committee also, telling of the need for immediate action to save them from serious loss.

SAYS STATE IS FITTED FOR REHABILITATION

Madison, Wis. Feb. 21—Wisconsin is especially fitted to apply the principal of the federal plan for rehabilitation of the industrially handicapped locally, because of its organized vocational training schools, and the activity of the state industrial commission, a report of the state board of education presented to the governor today, bringing out.

In making its report the board suggested that the Conant bill now before the legislature contains the essentail features of a system for rehabilitation of handicapped that will operate to give the state an efficient means of bringing its injured back to usefulness.

The work of salvaging accidentally crippled or disabled and restoring them to economic self-dependence must be done on a scale for taking care of 1,600 persons annually in Wisconsin alone, the report points out.

Stating that reports of private effort at rehabilitation of the industrially handicapped had always failed and that it has been pointed out continually that the work is a state and national duty. The board declares that "Wisconsin should at the earliest possible moment undertake this most important social work."

Wisconsin is said to be especially well suited to cooperate with the national government in its rehabilitation program through its vocational schools located in 40 or more cities. According to the report of the board of education, not only the industrial schools but all other educational institutions and training schools would be made these use of for the retraining of the handicapped under supervision of the state board of vocational education.

CALLAHAN TO OPPOSE CARY

PIONEER OF WISCONSIN EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM WILL BE CANDIDATE FOR STATE SUPERINTENDENT'S JOB

Madison, Wis. Feb. 21—John Callahan director of vocational education in Wisconsin and for 30 years connected with the public schools of the state, will be a candidate against C. P. Cary at the April election for state superintendent of public instruction, it became known today.

First Opposition

Superintendent Cary who has been in position for 18 years, has previously been unopposed for re-election. Mr. Callahan has declared his intention of instituting a vigorous campaign which he says will overcome the political inertia which superintendent carries with it.

His candidacy will be based on a plan of re-organization of Wisconsin educational system by doing away with the present dual administration. He proposes to stand for a constitutional amendment which will change the office of superintendent of public instruction from its present political character and make it appointive by a representative state board of education.

Backs Skogmo Bill

Mr. Callahan has come out as an advocate of the Skogomo plan for administration of the state school system. He proposes that administration of public schools should be carried out by a central board of education, which would appoint a secretary or commissioner. Inspection duties and formulation of the educational policies of the state would rest with this board, while the board of university and normal regents would continue to serve.

The candidacy of Mr. Callahan starts the final stage of an educational battle in the state that will in the end be fought out on the floor of the legislature. There has been a growing feeling in the state that some sort of agreement or re-organization would have to be affected, or the schools would suffer.

The new candidate says that he does not feel that a return to administration by the superintendent of public instruction, as the office is now constituted, would work for the interest of education in Wisconsin. He is asking for a change which in his opinion, will place the state as a leader, instead of its present rating as thirty-second among the states of the nation.

WATCHES BIG SAW CUT OFF HIS FOOT

Eau Claire Wis.—Ben Dietzler, 23 former soldier, although minus a foot, considers himself lucky. He was working on a saw carriage in Dietzler saw mill at Cadott when a log partly cut in two rolled his way. Losing the carriage, he jumped, but as he did so he struck the release lever and the carriage started again. This threw him onto the platform and he was whisked toward the revolving saw. By a superhuman effort he threw himself on one side, but was unable to remove his foot which the saw cut off at the instep.

LEGISLATURE WILL BOOST FARM LAWS

HOPE TO SECURE LEGISLATION WHICH WILL AID STATE MARKETING; FARMERS CONTROL LOWER HOUSE

Madison, Wis., Feb. 21—Farm legislation is to occupy an important place in the calendar of the present legislature, a survey of measures affecting the agricultural interests of the state shows. With farmer members controlling the lower house, it is expected that the farming industry will receive favorable consideration.

Most attention is centered on the administration marketing bill, and on tax measures, which in effect are aimed at relieving the farmer of some of the burden he now carries. Marketing strikes at the center of the problem of distribution of products with which agricultural interests are most concerned.

Boost Cooperation

Cooperative enterprises of farmers are to be fostered should the bill drafted by the present division of markets be adopted in its present form. Provision is made for supervision of the farmer concern, with emphasis laid on regulation of finances, to remove the main cause for failure in the past.

The proposed law would also furnish means for the agricultural producers to find markets for their products and would establish standard grades and [illegible] which it is expected would do much to raise the standard of farm products of the state offered for distribution outside of Wisconsin.

In a measure largely supplementary to the marketing bill Senator [illegible] would permit farmers to [illegible] money on products stored in warehouses. His bill, which will aid in permitting the producers to hold their products for more even distribution thruout the year, has already passed the senate and has gone to the assembly for action.

May Own Storage Houses

The assembly state affairs committee has reported favorably on a socialistic measure of Steven S. Steinhardt of Milwaukee, providing for a constitutional amendment to permit the state to own and operate storage houses, grain elevators and warehouses. Non-partisan interests in the state are strongly behind the resolution, which will be voted on in the lower house soon. Should this resolution get by the assembly, members declare it will be killed by the senators.

Settlement of the large areas of the unused farm lands of northern Wisconsin is aimed at in a joint resolution introduced by Senator Werden providing for a constitutional amendment to permit the state to borrow money for extending state aid to settlers.

A resolution of the same nature as Senator Werden's was passed by the 1919 legislature but permitted a one per cent tax on the taxable property of the state amounting to $4,500,000,000 which frightened the senators with its magnitude. His proposal will permit an appropriation of not more than 2 mills on the dollar for land settlement purposes.

Tied up closely with the direct agricultural measures are the proposals for raising taxes during the coming years. The administration proposes to shift the burden to incomes which will largely relieve the farmers of any additional tax. No move has been made to increase the general property tax in any way, all measures being aimed at incomes. Farmer members are behind the income tax-tax proposals, and other measures which will shift some of the tax burden from their shoulders.

[illegible] CALL THE TOWN [illegible]

Madison, Wis., Feb. 19—The town of Rat River, in Marinette county, has grown tired of its name, and is asking the legislature for a change.

Assemblyman Anderson has come to the [illegible] with a bill to legalize a [illegible] to "Silver Creek."

Howard Erasure, of Stevens Point, is spending the week with the Rodney Rice family in Wickham addition.

CLOSING DAYS BRING BIG RUSH OF BILLS

Madison, Wis., Feb. 19—Members of the assembly who had been holding their bills in the background, poured in a steady stream of measures on the final day of the five week limit and raised their total to 545, a number 110 less than two years ago. Senators ran a close second with a record of 222 bills brought in on the last day, bringing their total to 982.

The only avenue of bill introduction that assembly members have henceforth will be through committees, as the result of declaration that they will object to unanimous consent for bringing in measures after the time limit. Senatorial courtesy is expected to permit the barrier to be lowered at times when members of the upper house have legislation of particular interest to introduce.

Past experience has shown, according to the legislative reference library that about half as many bills come thru committee and from the floor by unanimous consent after the five week period, as before.

The onrush of the final day brought a realization to the legislators that their hopes for a cut in the session because of fewer bills to consider were without substantial foundation. They now expect that 1,500 measures will be up for consideration before the session has been ended.

Committees now will shoulder the bulk of the work. The thrashing out of most legislation goes on in committee rooms with only the perfunctory voting, as a rule, on the floor of the legislature, except on the bigger measures which bring out debate.

FIND STILLS ON WAUSAU FARMS

PROHIBITION OFFICIALS GET TWENTY-TWO GALLONS OF MOONSHINE AND FOUR STILLS IN RAIDS

Prohibition authorities, F. J. Payson, H. V. Haelberg and Under-[illegible] Sewert took four stills and twenty-two gallons of moonshine in a raid on four farms in the town of Halsey, Marathon county. The moonshine was on exhibition at the Sheriff's office in Wausau where hundreds of people flocked to see the liquor and the stills with which it was manufactured.

Clear as Crystal

The moonshine was contained in many fruit jars which stood around. [illegible] of all hues, from a milky color to one quart as clear as crystal. To the questions of curious onlookers, Mr. Payson explained "That bottle of clear moonshine was made by a double distillation, after which the charcoal process was used, making it a clear as crystal." And he continued to tell how the stills were operated and what sort of materials were used in the mash.

The officers went to the town of Halsey by automobile and carried search warrants for the properties of Ludwig Wienser, Louis Schultz, Fred Borke and Henry Kage. On the farms of all four, stills were found and some moonshine and mash. In all 450 gallons of mash were destroyed by the prohibition officers, and twenty-two gallons of liquid was discovered.

Huge Kettles

Two of the stills were huge copper kettles, apparently built by experts and at the top pieces of tin were welded. PROMINENT REAL ESTATE MAN CONFESSES HE HELD UP BANK AT STOCKHOLM; SAYS HE WAS "HARD UP"

Red Wing, Minn.—Peter J. Beltz, respected real estate man here, late on Saturday confessed robbing the state bank of Stockholm, Wis.

He entered the bank alone Saturday morning, securing $1,900 in currency and $400 in silver and fled in an automobile.

Three hours later he was arrested ten miles south of Red Wing by sheriff's deputies, who trailed him across Lake Pepin on the ice. They found the money in his automobile.

Was "Hard Up"

In the Goodhue county jail Beltz refused to give a reason for his act except to say he "was hard up" and needed the money. He lived in a fine home here and was believed at time to have considerable wealth. A few days ago he left, telling friends and relatives he was going to North Dakota on business.

Early on Saturday he was seen driving across Lake Pepin on the ice. H. R. Anderson, cashier of the bank at Stockholm, saw him on the ice. A few minutes later he entered the bank and demanded money. He wore a mask and was armed. Anderson began handing out currency and silver in bundles and bags.

A customer entered and Beltz is said to have turned his gun on the customer. The customer fled and Beltz followed him out. He jumped into his machine and drove rapidly away.

Trailed Across Ice

A posse of deputies trailed him across the ice six miles below Red Wing. Beltz took a back road, apparently intending to enter Red Wing from the west. His machine stalled on a steep hill and while he was trying to get a farmer to pull him out, deputies caught up with the machine. Beltz offered no resistance.

Cashier Anderson of Stockholm was here late on Saturday and identified Beltz as the holdup man. Beltz then confessed.

SAVE LEGISLATORS FAKE DANCE TICKETS

Madison, Wis.—Investigation of the conduct of the university junior promenade and an explanation of how it happened that certain members of the assembly were denied admission on yellow tickets to the capitol on the evening of the big dance was demanded by Assemblyman F. J. Petersen of Milwaukee when that body convened on Thursday.

Chief Clerk Shaffer explained that two days before the annual affair he found a large number of yellow admission tickets labeled "for the prom" on his desk, which he distributed among the members. Assemblymen holding these tickets were denied admission last Friday until late in the night, altho some of the assemblymen were all dressed up.

"I look upon this as an error, but I want to say that no member of the committee nor the prom chairman ever saw me personally or even phoned me, as should have been done," said the clerk.

"Friday afternoon a Mr. Miller did give me some blue tickets for distribution to my force of office clerks."

Assemblyman E. B. Grunwald of Milwaukee claimed that it was evident that there was carelessness on the part of the prom officials. He was backed up by Assemblyman Ben H. Mahon of Milwaukee, who said:

"The prom chairman should be made to come here and publicly apologize to the members of the assembly and the chief clerk."

BEE KEEPERS ASKING HELP

WANT $10,000 TO FIGHT FOUL BROOD AMONG APIARIES IN EASTERN PART OF WISCONSIN; RELATE WORK DONE

Madison, Wis. Feb. 21—Bee keepers and representatives of the state department of agriculture appeared befwore the joint finance committee Thursday afternoon to ask more state aid to eradicate and control the American foul brood, which Wisconsin, and thereby create a severe loss to farmers depending upon their bees for a considerable portion of their income.

Tells Of Work

F. C. Fracker of the ethnological bureau of the department of agriculture, presented the committee with the results of the work already accomplished in exterminating the foul brood, which is a contagious disease [illegible] honey bees.

[illegible] counties in the eastern part [illegible] received the attention [illegible] department, he stated [illegible] for an appropriation of [illegible] complete the work, at the [illegible] extending to two more [illegible] The loss to Wisconsin each [illegible] because of the disease is estimated at between $100,000 and [illegible] pounds valued at $1,250,000, the committee was told. Counties in the north central part of the state have requested that steps be taken to block the progress of the foul brood for this reason an appropriation greater than the yearly amount of $5,000 now granted, is needed, Mr. Fracker said.

The sum of $500 per year per county for a period of four years is required to eradicate the disease, it is claimed.

N. E. France, of the Pittsville normal school, presented the committee with information regarding the spread of the disease. The honey of an infected colony of bees is stolen by healthy ones, who become infected from it he said.

Bee keepers presented their case to the committee also, telling of the need for immediate action to save them from serious loss.

SAYS STATE IS FITTED FOR REHABILITATION

Madison, Wis. Feb. 21—Wisconsin is especially fitted to apply the principal of the federal plan for rehabilitation of the industrially handicapped locally, because of its organized vocational training schools, and the activity of the state industrial commission, a report of the state board of education presented to the governor today, bringing out.

In making its report the board suggested that the Conant bill now before the legislature contains the essentail features of a system for rehabilitation of handicapped that will operate to give the state an efficient means of bringing its injured back to usefullness.

The work of salvaging accidentally crippled or disabled and restoring them to economic self-dependence must be done on a scale for taking care of 1,600 persons annually in Wisconsin alone, the report points out.

Stating that reports of private effort at rehabilitation of the industrially handicapped had always failed and that it has been pointed out continually that the work is a state and national duty. The board declares that "Wisconsin should at the earliest possible moment undertake this most important social work."

Wisconsin is said to be especially well suited to cooperate with the national government in its rehabilitation program through its vocational schools located in 40 or more cities. According to the report of the board of education, not only the industrial schools but all other educational institutions and training schools would be made these uso of for the retraining of the handicapped under supervision of the state board of vocational education.

CALLAHAN TO OPPOSE CARY

PIONEER OF WISCONSIN EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM WILL BE CANDIDATE FOR STATE SUPERINTENDENT'S JOB

Madison, Wis. Feb. 21—John Callahan director of vocational education in Wisconsin and for 30 years connected with the public schools of the state, will be a candidate against C. P. Cary at the April election for state superintendent of public instruction, it became known today.

First Opposition

Incumbent Cary who has been in opposition for 18 years, has previously been unopposed for re-election. Mr. Callahan has declared his intention of instituting a vigorous campaign which he says will overcome the political inertia which superintendent carries with it.

His candidacy will be based on a plan of re-organization of Wisconsin educational system by doing away with the present dual administration. He proposes to stand for a constitutional amendment which will change the office of superintendent of public instruction from its present political character and make it appointive by a representative state board of education.

Backs Skogmo Bill

Mr. Callahan has come out as an advocate of the Skogomo plan for administration of the state school system. He proposes that administration of public schools should be carried out by a central board of education, which would appoint a secretary or commissioner. Inspection duties and formulation of the educational policies of the state would rest with this board, while the board of university and normal regents would continue to serve.

The candidacy of Mr. Callahan starts the final stage of an educational battle in the state that will in the end be fought out on the floor of the legislature. There has been a growing feeling in the state that some sort of agreement or re-organization would have to be affected, or the schools would suffer.

The new candidate says that he does not feel that a return to administration by the superintendent of public instruction, as the office is now constituted, would work for the interest of education in Wisconsin. He is asking for a change which in his opinion, will place the state as a leader, instead of its present rating as thirty-second among the states of the nation.

Eau Claire Wis.—Ben Dietzler, 23 former soldier, althrough minus a foot, considers himself lucky. He was working on a saw carriage in Dietzler saw mill at Cadott when a log partly cut in two rolled his way. Mounting the carriage, he jumped, but as he did so he struck the release lever and the carriage started again. This threw him onto the platform and he was whisked toward the revolving saw. By a superhuman effort he threw himself on one side, but was unable to remove his foot which the saw cut off at the instep.

LEGISLATURE WILL BOOST FARM LAWS

HOPE TO SECURE LEGIFLATION WHICH WILL AID STATE MARKETING; FARMERS CONTROL LOWER HOUSE

Madison, Wis., Feb. 21—Farm legislation is to occupy an important place in the calendar of the present legislature, a survey of measures affecting the agricultural interests of the state shows. With farmer members controlling the lower house, it is expected that the farming industry will receive favorable consideration.

Most attention is centered on the administration marketing bill, and on tax measures, which in effect are aimed at relieving the farmer of some of the burden he now carries. Marketing strikes at the center of the problem of distribution of products with which agricultural interests are most concerned.

Beast Cooperation

Cooperative enterprises of farmers are to be fostered should the bill drafted by the present division of markets be adopted in its present form. Provision is made for supervision of the farmer concern, with emphasis laid on regulation of finances, to remove the main cause for failure in the past.

The proposed law would also furnish means for the agricultural producers to find markets for their products, and would establish standard grades and Wisconsin labels, which it is expected would do much to raise the standard of farm products of the state offered for distribution outside of Wisconsin.

In a measure largely supplementary to the marketing bill Senator [illegible] would permit farmers to borrow money on products stored in warehouses. His bill, which will aid in permitting the producers to hold their products for more even distribution thruout the year, has already passed the senate and has gone to the assembly for action.

May Own Storage Houses

The assembly state affairs committee has reported favorably on a socialistic measure of Steven S. Stopowski of Milwaukee, providing for a constitutional amendment to permit the state to own and operate storage houses, grain elevators and warehouses. Non-partisan interests in the state are strongly behind the resolution, which will be voted on in the lower house soon. Should this resolution get by the assembly, members declare it will be killed by the senators.

Settlement of the large areas of the unused farm lands of northern Wisconsin is aimed at in a joint resolution introduced by Senator Werden providing for a constitutional amendment to permit the state to borrow money for extending state aid to settlers.

A resolution of the same nature as Senator Werden's was passed by the 1919 legislature but permitted a one per cent tax on the taxable property of the state amounting to $4,500,000,000 which frightened the senators with its magnitude. His proposal will permit an appropriation of not more than 2 mills on the dollar for land settlement purposes.

Tied up closely with the direct agricultural measures are the proposals for raising taxes during the coming years. The administration proposes to shift the burden to incomes, which will largely relieve the farmers of any additional tax. No move has been made to increase the general property tax in any way, all measures being aimed at incomes. Farmer members are behind the income sur-tax proposals, and other measures which will shift some of the tax burden from their shoulders.

WILL NOT CALL THE TOWN RAT RIVER?

Madison, Wis., Feb. 19—The town of Rat River, in Marinette county, has grown tired of its name, and is asking the legislature for a change.

Assemblyman Ankerson has come to the resere with a bill to legalize a shift to "Silver Cliff."

Howard Erasure, of Stevens Point, is spending the week with the Rodney Rice family in Wickham addition.

CLOSING DAYS BRING BIG RUSH OF BILLS

Madison, Wis., Feb. 19—Members of the assembly who had been holding their bills in the background, poured in a steady stream of measures on the final day of the five week limit and raised their total to 545, a number 110 less than two years ago. Senators ran a close second with a record of 222 bills brought in on the last day, bringing their total to 382.

The only avenue of bill introduction that assembly members have henceforth will be through committees, as the result of declaration that they will object to unanimous consent for bringing in measures after the time limit. Senatorial courtesy is expected to permit the barrier to be lowered at times when members of the upper house have legislation of particular interest to introduce.

Past experience has shown, according to the legislative reference library that about half as many bills come thru committee and from the floor by unanimous consent after the five week period, as before.

The crush of the final day brought a realization to the legislators that their hopes for a cut in the session because of fewer bills to consider were without substantial foundation. They now expect that 1,500 measures will be up for consideration before the session has been ended.

Committees now will shoulder the bulk of the work. The thrashing out of most legislation goes on in committee rooms with only the perfunctory voting, as a rule, on the floor of the legislature, except on the bigger measures which bring out debate.

FIND STILLS ON WAUSAU FARMS

PROHIBITION OFFICIALS GET TWENTY-TWO GALLONS OF MOONSHINE AND FOUR STILLS IN RAIDS

Prohibition authorities, F. J. Payson, H. V. Haelberg and Under-Sheriff Arthur Stewert took four stills and twenty-two gallons of moonshine in a raid on four farms in the town of Halsey, Marathon county. The moonshine was on exhibition at the Sheriff's office in Wausau where hundreds of people flocked to see the liquor and the stills with which it was manufactured.

Clear as Crystal

The moonshine was contained in many fruit jars which stood around the wall of all sizes, from a milky color to one quart as clear as crystal. To the questions of curious onlookers, Mr. Payson explained "That bottle of clear moonshine was made by a double distillation, after which the charcoal process was used, making it a clear as crystal." And he continued to tell how the stills were operated and what sort of materials were used in the mash.

The officers went to the town of Halsey by automobile and carried search warrants for the properties of Ludwig Wiehser, Louis Schultz, Fred Borke and Henry Kage. On the farms of all four, stills were found and some moonshine and mash. In all 450 gallons of mash were destroyed by the prohibition officers, and twenty-two gallons of liquid was discovered.

Huge Kettles

Two of the stills were huge copper kettles, apparently built by experts and at the top pieces of tin were welded. This is the case with many stills according to the prohibition officers, who declare that they don't know why. A third still was improvised out of a wash boiler lined with copper. The still found in Henry Kage's cheese factory was different from any of the officers had ever seen before. It was made from a beer starter and boasted a capacity of fifteen to twenty gallons.

All of the men are under a bond of $500 and their appearance in court is set for March 17st before Judge Marchetti.

In the Jutland battle, cruisers opened fire at a distance of over 11 miles.

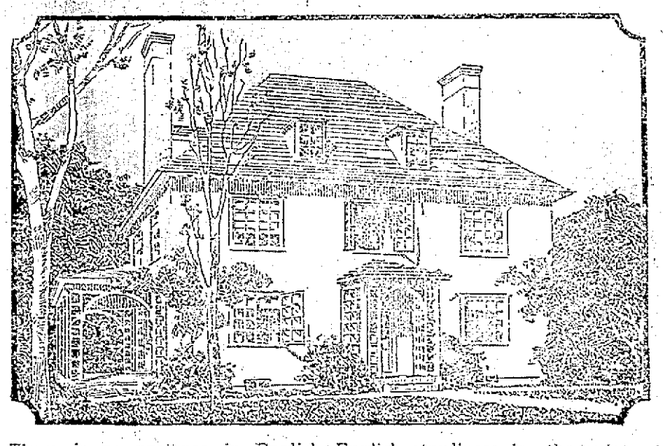
AN ATTRACTIVE HOMELIKE HOUSE



There is no pretense in English architecture. The charm of houses of the English style type is due to their informality, their simplicity, their frank expression of a love of nature. They are built for comfort, not show. They look like homes, and are homelike, even when empty.

The tall chimneys and the steep roof with a slight curve at the spring, is built to shed heavy snows and rains. Casement windows, and an unassuming, sheltered front entrance are characteristics of the English type.

On the interior, the woodwork is usually of oak, on account of its durability, serviceability and beautiful grain. It is usually stained with wax and is used abundantly, but in simple, rather heavy lines.

Is English Style

The house here illustrated is a particularly good example of the English style as adapted to American needs by American architects. There is no meaningless adornment, but rather its good appearance is due to the well-studied placing of doors and windows, to good proportion, balance, and a nice choice of design in exterior details.

Its floor plan is practically a rectangle- a condition that makes for economy. A 45 to 50 foot lot is large enough to give it a proper setting, so that it is really a practical house for the average homebuilder.

Well Designed House

The formal entrance opens upon a vestibule, a feature which should find a place in every well-designed house because it offers shelter without violating family privacy or comfort. To the rear of the vestibule is the stair hall, dividing the house into halves. The stair of truly English sturdiness is the outstanding feature in the hall. Besides the stair is the ever-useful coat closet.

On the interior, the woodwork is usually of oak, on account of its durability, serviceability and beautiful grain. It is usually stained with wax and is used abundantly, but in simple, rather heavy lines.

Is English Style

The house here illustrated is a particularly good example of the English style as adapted to American needs by American architects. There is no meaningless adornment, but rather its good appearance is due to the well-studied placing of doors and windows, to good proportion, balance, and a nice choice of design in exterior details.

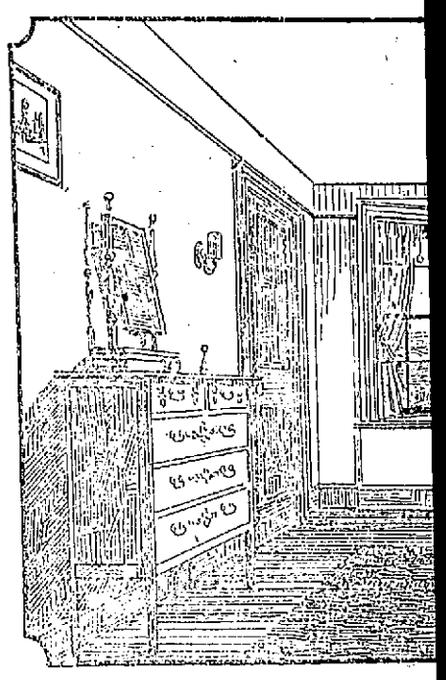
Its floor plan is practically a rectangle- a condition that makes for economy. A 45 to 50 foot lot is large enough to give it a proper setting, so that it is really a practical house for the average homebuilder.

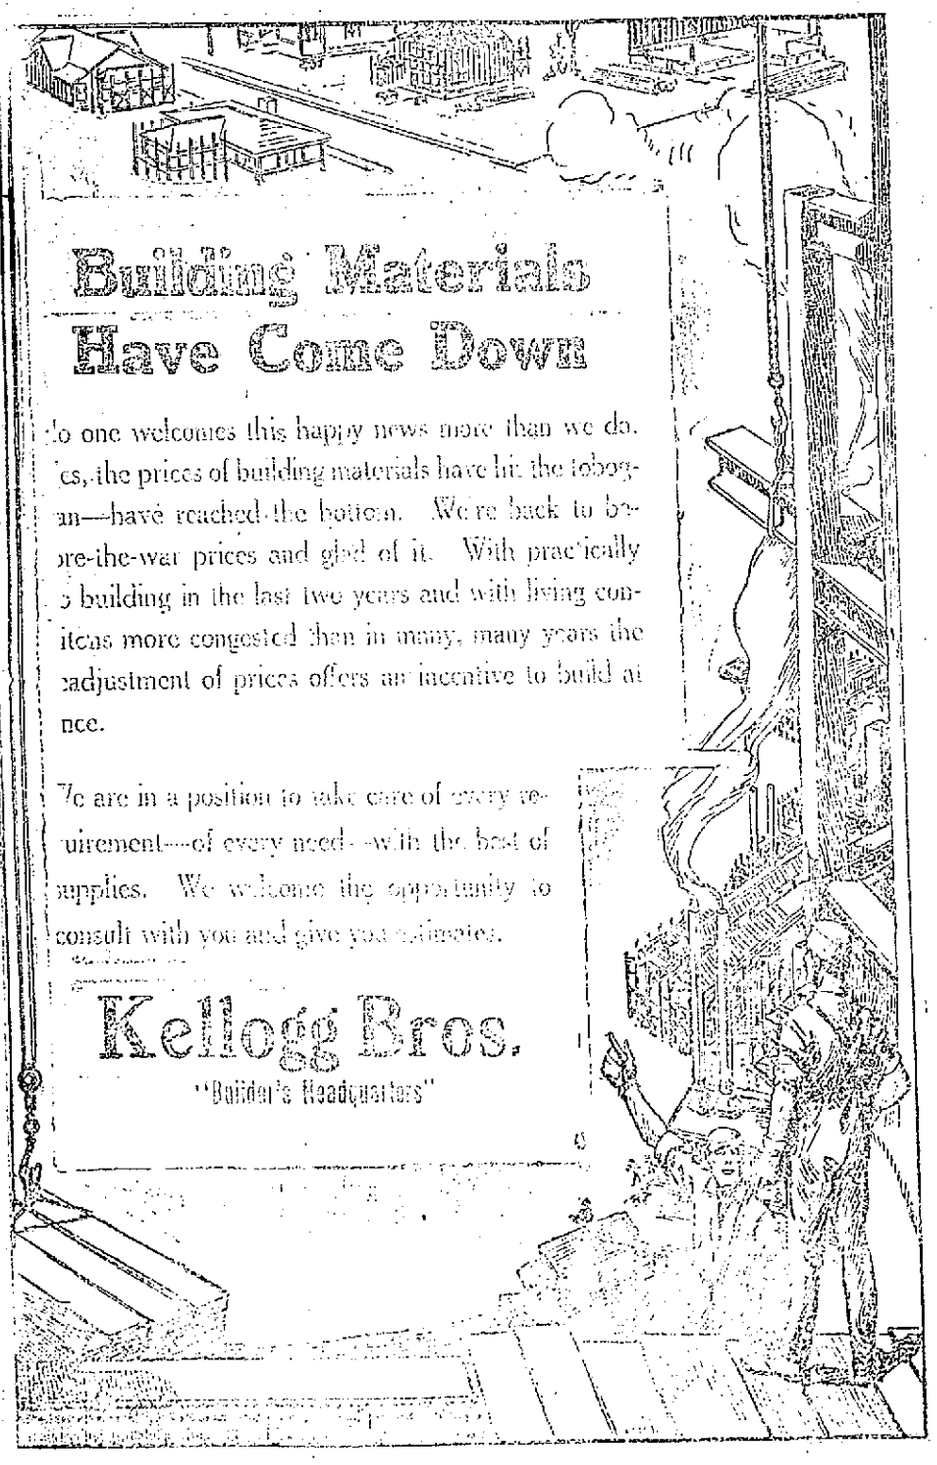
There are seven rooms, besides an attic that can be used for a billard room, or could be finished off into two bed rooms, of desired.

Well Designed House

The formal entrance opens upon a vestibule, a feature which should find a place in every well-designed house because it offers shelter without violating family privacy or comfort. To the rear of the vestibule is the stair hall, dividing the house into halves. The stair of truly English sturdiness is the outstanding feature in the hall, Besides the stair is the ever-useful coat closet.

French doors at the left open into the living room that is 24'2"x13'0", and extends the entire dept of the house. Hospitality and home life are typified by the fireplace that occupies a central position on the outside wall. There is a long wall space opposite it, suggestive for piano or davenport. One entire end of the room is occupied by two built-in bookcases, with a seat between them under the front casements. At each side of the fireplace single doors matching the French doors lead out





Building Materials Have Come Down

No one welcomes this happy news more than we do. Yes, the prices of building materials have hit the toboggan—have reached the bottom. We're back to before-the-war prices and glad of it. With practically no building in the last two years and with living conditions more congested than in many, many years the readjustment of prices offers an incentive to build at once.

We are in a position to take care of every requirement—of every need—with the best of supplies. We welcome the opportunity to consult with you and give you estimates.

Four bedrooms nearly equal in size occupy corner locations on the second floor. Each one gets ample light and cross-ventilation that does not sweep in a draft across the bed. Casement windows make the problem of curtaining easy for they are in themselves so attractive both from within and without that glass curtains are not essential.

Each bedroom has a clothes closet, and one of them also has a chest of trays, removable like the trays of a trunk. This is enclosed behind a regular interior door like the others, and answers the purpose of a chiffonier. The open ends in front make it easy to find the particular article one is in search and without turning the contents of several drawers topsy-turby in the process.

A bathroom that is convenient and up-to-date in its equipment, and two linen closets in the hall, complete the very comfortable layout of this home.

THINKS WOLVES WERE TWO DOGS

TOWN OF HANSEN HUNTER SAYS HE HAS FAILED TO FIND TRACE OF ANIMALS WHICH FOLLOWED HENRY WHITROCK

Organized hunts for wolves in the town of Hansen, where Henry Whitrock of Pleasant Hill, states he was followed and attacked several times [illegible] of these animals, have failed to [illegible]cal any sign of them, according to [illegible]d Pickett, one of the best [illegible] hunters out in that section. Mr. Pickett states that he is of the opinion that the wolves which Mr. Whitrock stated had followed and attacked him were nothing more than dogs. It would be almost impossible to tell the difference between a dog and a wolf that might follow a man at night, he states and few, if any, wolves remain in that section of the country.

Hunted For Tracks.

Mr. Pickett states that he was out the day after the incident and scoured the country around there for a trace of the animals. According to his story there were no wolf tracks to be found and as the snow was fresh they would have been easily traced. Other organized hunts in that country have been instituted by the farmers but up to the present time Mr. Pickett says that they have found neither a wolf nor any tracks.

"Had it been two wolves which attacked Mr. Whitrock he probably wouldn't have been here to tell about [illegible] In the opinion of Mr. Pickett, "because when wolves get hungry enough to attack a man they are dangerous animals. Dogs are very apt to run along and playfully jump and snap at a person on the road, and at night it would be almost impossible to distinguish between a dog and a wolf.

Is Experienced Hunter

Mr. Pickett is a thoroly experienced hunter and states that he spends practically all his time in the winter hunting and trapping. He has seen no wolves in that part of the country for the past five or six years, he states. Several years ago he did meet [illegible] in the woods there on his [illegible]. He at first thought that [illegible] of them was his dog but on calling [illegible] of s[illegible] to come. And then [illegible] to drive him home and again [illegible]ed to obey. When he got closer [illegible] a stick at what he was supposed was his dog and found that it was a wolf. The animal did not bother him, he states.

ATTENDANCE UP AT WISCONSIN

NO APPRECIABLE FALLING OFF IN NUMBER OF STUDENTS NOTICED AT UNIVERSITY DESPITE OF DEPRESSION

Madison, Feb. 16—Registration of students at the University of Wisconsin during the registration period for the second semester, Feb. 10-12, was heavy despite the general depression and unsettled conditions prevailing.

Legislation Heavy

That the number attending the university the second semester will compare favorably with that of the first is the opinion of the university officials, altho no definite figures can be compiled as yet, since registration continues to be heavy during the first days of the semester, which began Monday, February 14th.

Reports that other universities in the middle west are experiencing a decided falling off in school registrants will not be true of Wisconsin if the expectations of W. D. Hiestand university registrar, are fulfilled. Indications are, however, that the number will not reach that of the first period, which was 7,001.

Many Get Bonus

Heavy school expenses and general hard times are given as the reasons for the decrease in attendance at other universities. Many men students find it possible to remain at Wisconsin because they are receiving a state bonus of $30 a month, granted for military service during the war. This is looked upon as a reason why the attendance at the university here should not show the decrease reported by other schools.

The number of students withdrawing from school at the end of the past semester because of failures and unsatisfactory work is no higher than usual, Scott H. Goodnight, dean of women, states. No figures are issued by the university showing the exact number of students asked to withdraw because of their inability to meet the required standards of scholarship.

DENIES THEY PARKED CORSETS DURING DANCE

Stamford, Conn.—Stamford men and women of social prominence who are interested in the Babies' Aid society, a charitable organization, and in the Stamford Women's club, were distressed on Saturday by the publication of a story that women and girls who attended a dance given under the auspices of these organizations here recently had "parked" their corsets in an anteroom and had partaken more or less freely of intoxicating liquors.

Mrs. G. A. Stafford, wife of a New York business man and vice president of the Women's club, said her maid was in the anteroom from the time the dance started until it ended and that the maid asserted no girl or woman removed her corset.

Mrs. Stafford was in and out of the room from the beginning to the end of the dance, she said, and saw nothing of the kind. "I can say that none of the girls or women who attended the dance drank intoxicating liquor," she continued. "These stories about 'parking' corsets and drinking liquor are all base lies and gossip."

"CHURCHGOERS SPECIAL" RUNS OUT OF KENOSHA

Kenosha, Wis., Feb. 21.—The unusual action of a railway company has received quite a deal of favorable comment here, it is reported. One of the trains of the Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee Electric Railway company which has been much used by churchgoers on Sunday mornings is to be held at the Kenosha station until the services are over. Scores of people from the town of Pleasant Prairie along the line of the electric are regular worshipers at St. Thomas church here. With the new arrangement they may not only get home in time for dinner, without leaving before the services are over, but may even extend greetings to their friends when church is over, with no semblance of the week-day "rush".

Twenty per cent of the entire area of Madagascar is covered with forest.

THEATRES

AT THE THEATRES

There are some dramas that we would rather see on the screen than on the stage. Such a drama is "Mid-channel", known as the greatest play of married life by the greatest playwright on modern marriage, Sir Arthur Wing Pinero. Ethel Barrymore acted the principal role in Broadway, but the performance of Clara Kimball Young in the six-reel picturization of "Mid-Channel" surpasses anything ever seen. The effect of this wonderful photoplay is electrifying; it is nothing else but a revelation of the motion picture achievement—the settings, the gorgeous gowns, the interior setting are lavish to a fault, and above all the remarkable performance of Clara Kimball Young leave nothing to be desired in screen art. This wonderful production will be shown at the Ideal Theatre Tuesday and Wednesday evenings.

He responded to an encore with singing, "In the Gloaming." Mr. Natwick was accompanied by the orchestra. All musical numbers elicited great applause from the large number present and everybody was loud in their praises of the entire affair.

THINKS WOLVES WERE TWO DOGS

TOWN OF HANSEN HUNTER SAYS HE HAS FAILED TO FIND TRACE OF ANIMALS WHICH FOLLOWED HENRY WHITROCK

Organized hunts for wolves in the town of Hansen, where Henry Whitrock of Pleasant Hill, states he was followed and attacked several times [illegible] of those animals, have failed to [illegible] any sign of them, according to [illegible] Pickett, one of the best [illegible] hunters out in that section. Mr. Pickett states that he is of the opinion that the wolves which Mr. Whitrock stated had followed and attacked him were nothing more than dogs. It would be almost impossible to tell the difference between a dog and a wolf that might follow a man at night, he states and few, if any, wolves remain in that section of the country.

Hunted For Tracks

Mr. Pickett states that he was out the day after the incident and scoured the country around there for a trace of the animals. Accoding to his story there were no wolf tracks to be found and as the snow was fresh they would have been easily traced. Other organized hunts in that country have been instituted by the farmers but up to the present time Mr. Pickett says that they have found neither a wolf nor any tracks.

"Had it been two wolves which attacked Mr. Whitrock he probably wouldn't have been here to tell about it," is the opinion of Mr. Pickett, "because when wolves get hungry enough to attack a man they are dangerous animals. Dogs are very apt to run alone and playfully jump and snap at a person on the road, and at night it would be almost impossible to distinguish between a dog and a wolf.

Is Experienced Hunter

Mr. Pickett is a thoroly experienced hunter and states that he spends practically all his time in the winter hunting and trapping. He has seen no wolves in that part of the country for the past five or six years, he states. Several years ago he did meet two wolves in the woods there on his trap line. He at first thought that one of them was his dog but on calling to it it started to come. And then started to drive him home and again refused to obey. When he got closer with a stick at what he was supposed was his dog and found that it was a wolf. The animal did not bother him, he states.

ATTENDANCE UP AT WISCONSIN

NO APPRECIABLE FALLING OFF IN NUMBER OF STUDENTS NOTICED AT UNIVERSITY IN SPITE OF DEPRESSION

Madison, Feb. 16—Registration of students at the University of Wisconsin during the registration period for the second semester, Feb. 10-12, was heavy despite the general depression and unsettled conditions prevailing.

Registration Heavy

That the number attending the university the second semester will compare favorably with that of the first is the opinion of the university officials, altho no definite figures can be compiled as yet, since registration continues to be heavy during the first days of the semester, which began Monday, February 14th.

Reports that other universities in the middle west are experiencing a decided falling off in school registrants will not be true of Wisconsin if the expectations of W. D. Hiestand university registrar, are fulfilled. Indications are, however, that the number will not reach that of the first period, [illegible] 7,904.

Many Get Bonus

Heavy school expenses and general hard times are given as the reasons for the decrease in attendance at other universities. Many men students find it possible to remain at Wisconsin because they are receiving a state bonus of $30 a month, granted for military service during the war. This is looked upon as a reason why the attendance at the university here should not show the decrease reported by other schools.

The number of students withdrawing from school at the end of the past semester because of failures and unsatisfactory work is no higher than usual, Scott H. Goodnight, dean of men states. No figures are issued by the university showing the exact number of students asked to withdraw because of their inability to meet the required standards of scholarship.

DENIES THEY PARKED CORSETS DURING DANCE

Stamford, Conn.—Stamford men and women of social prominence who are interested in the Babies' Aid society, a charitable organization, and in the Stamford Women's club, were distressed on Saturday by the publication of a story that women and girls who attended a dance given under the auspices of these organizations here recently had "parked" their corsets in an anteroom and had partaken more or less freely of intoxicating liquors.

Mrs. G. A. Stafford, wife of a New York business man and vice president of the Women's club, said her maid was in the anteroom from the time the dance started until it ended and that the maid asserted no girl or woman removed her corset.

Mrs. Stafford was in and out of the room from the beginning to the end of the dance, she said, and saw nothing of the kind. "I can say that none of the girls or women who attended the dance drank intoxicating liquor," she continued. "These stories about 'parking' corsets and drinking liquor are all base lies and gossip."

"CHURCHGOERS SPECIAL" RUNS OUT OF KENOSHA

Kenosha, Wis., Feb. 21.—The unusual action of a railway company has received quite a deal of favorable comment here, it is reported. One of the trains of the Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee Electric Railway company which has been much used by churchgoers on Sunday mornings is to be held at the Kenosha station until the services are over. Scores of people from the town of Pleasant Prairie along the line of the electric are regular worshipers at St. Thomas church here. With the new arrangement they may not only get home in time for dinner, without leaving before the services are over, but may even extend greetings to their friends when church is over, with no semblance of the weekday "rush".

THEATRES

AT THE THEATRES

There are some dramas that we could rather see on the screen than on the stage. Such a drama is "Mid-channel", known as the greatest play of married life by the greatest playright on modern marriage, Sir Arthur Wing Pinero. Ethel Barrymore acted the principal role in Broadway, but the performance of Clara Kimball Young in the six-reel picturization of "Mid-Channel" surpasses anything ever seen. The effect of this wonderful photoplay is electrifying; it is nothing else but a revelation of the motion picture achievement—the settings, the gorgeous gowns, the interior setting are lavish to a fault, and above all the remarkable performance of Clara Kimball Young leave nothing to be desired in screen art. This wonderful production will be shown at the Ideal Theatre Tuesday and Wednesday evenings.

HEART OF WISCONSIN NEWS

PORT EDWARDS NEPCOS TRIM NATIONAL GUARD

The Wisconsin Rapids National Guard basketball team and the Port Edwards Nepcos played a very exciting game at the Port Edwards Auditorium Saturday evening in which the Nepcos came out ahead.

The Port Edwards team was the aggressor from the start, it having started the scoring soon after the opening of the game. Domke, of the Nepcos, shot a fine field goal and then the hard fighting of the game started. Up until this juncture, the game had been one of much scrambling after the ball. Eight points were scored by the Nepcos during the first half. The visiting team did not score during the first half.

At the outset of the second half, one could notice the change in the National Guard team. They seemed to be fighting harder and with the help of De Guerre, who substituted for R. Mathews, they started scoring. During this half the Guards made eleven points and the Nepcos five. The passing on both sides was a feature of the game and some of the getaways on both sides thrilled the spectators.

Tickner and Domke were the stars for Port Edwards, although all played very well. DeGuerre and L. LeRoux played a shade the best on the Guards. The National Guards played fine together and their teamwork at times was some of the best ever witnessed at Port Edwards. The final score was 13 to 9, favor of the Nepcos.

The line-ups were as follows: National Guards, L. Le Roux and Millenbach, forwards; Smith, center; L. Matthews and R. Matthews, guards; DeGuerre for R. Mathews in second half. Nepcos, Hines and Domke, forwards; L. LeRoux, center; Patrencis and Tickner, guards.

Neil Brennan refereed the game.

There was a preliminary game between the Port Edwards Boy Scouts and the Wisconsin Rapids Cubs in which some very fast playing was seen. The Port Edwards team had the edge on the playing throughout the game.

The first half ended with the Scouts in the lead by a score of 10 and 2. During the second half the Cubs came up on the Port Edwards team in score, the game ending with the Scouts in the lead, 15 to 9.

The line-ups were as follows: Cubs, Collier and [illegible], forwards; Searles, center; Pasalonis and Harnebrook, guards; Kisberg and Grieber substituted. Scouts, E. LeRoux and Hendricks, forwards; Pelot, center; Millard and Kayser, guards.

Pelot and E. LeRoux starred for Port Edwards. Searles and Collier did the best playing on the Cubs.

Neil Brennan refereed the game.

Among the guests at the Burton home are Mrs. Charles Hoyer (Gladys) played by Meghan Simpson, Florda Dixon, Lorna Anderson, Valerie Armsby, Bessie Roebach and Edith Brent, Catherine Waters.

ALL STARS WIN FROM BIRON BOY SCOUTS

The Biron Boy Scout basketball team played a very exciting game with the All Stars of Wisconsin Rapids Thursday evening at the Biron Memorial Hall. Mr. Voss says that the convention voted to have a perminent organization of school boards in Wisconsin and that the local boards in each town and village will be able to vote their budget and the administration will not be allowed to change said budget. The convention has a program that will do away with the firing of teachers that have already been hired by another school.

The representatives also are going to try and have all the schools co-operate and make the qualifications for school teachers. Mr. Voss states that the convention was a success throughout and that there will be an annual meeting every year.

GOB DESCRIBES ARMENIAN HORRORS

"You can't realize what a sight it is to see the refugee camp at Batum," Petty Officer George Porter, of Racine, Wis., writes his family, telling of the work of the Near East Relief in the ports along the Black Sea.

"The people are dying off little by little. There are workers of the relief organization here, but they don't seem to be able to take care of them all. They were the ones that made the camp. The families all live in grass huts, just high enough to sit up in, and they are covered with blankets. There is disease everywhere and the smell is terrible. I'm glad we didn't stay long as I couldn't stand it, and you know when I can't stand anything there are few that can. I am sorry for these refugees, but we can't help any. They don't want money though they would sell their lives for some clothes and food. They don't stop praising the Americans.

"Trebizonde was another Armenian town, but it was completely wiped out by the Turks, who are now in control of it. The Turks massacred all the Armenians over fifteen years of age and kept all under that age to bring them up as Turks. The city looked as if it was shot to pieces. Samsoun is the same as Trebizonde, so you can see what kind of country we are travelling through. I am sure glad that we are leaving Russia and Armenia because I am sick of what I have seen. I think that these tourists who are trying to see ravished Armenia will be sorry they ever came over. These relief workers are nearly dead from work. They are the people who can tell the U. S. something about this country."

Over 54,600 little Armenian children are housed, clothed and fed by the Near East Relief in Armenia and Syria. In all over 110,000 little children are being kept alive by American aid. KEEP IT UP!

"A NATION SAVED BY AMERICA," SAYS CLEVELAND H. DODGE

New York Business Man Describes Vast Armenian Work of Near East Relief.

Cleveland H. Dodge, New York banker and business man, director of the National City Bank, and treasurer of The Russell Sage Foundation, and of the Near East Relief, declares that a nation has been saved by American philanthropy, and the generosity of the American people through the Near East Relief, in its work for the Armenians.

"The lowest official estimate indicates that one million persons are living today who would not be alive had it not been for this relief." Mr. Dodge continued, "I have an autographic letter from Dr. H. Ohandjanian, president of the Armenian Republic, in which he writes: 'America literally saved us from starvation.'

"Wholly aside from adults who have been saved from starvation, we today have in orphanages and elsewhere under our care 110,000 homeless, fatherless or motherless children who are absolutely dependent upon us. This is exclusive of 63 hospitals with 6,552 beds, 128 clinics, rescue homes for girls and unnumbered thousands of refugees who are being helped through our industrial relief and in other ways.

"The Near East Relief has during the past four or five years commissioned and sent to the Near East more than 1,000 American relief workers, of whom 500 are still in the field, all of them working at great financial sacrifice—the standard salary being $50 per month and maintenance—and many of them facing great personal danger and hardship in the performance of their life-saving service. A score of them have died from typhus or other diseases more or less related to their faithfulness in the performance of relief service.

"Nor is that all. We have raised and disbursed during war times and in a war-torn area, in large measure under enemy control, more than $[illegible],000,000 in cash, and, including food, Red Cross and other supplies administered by our agents, a total of [illegible] and supplies in excess of $50,000,000. The official reports show that on June 30, 1920, we had in orphanages 54,000 children, and that we are partially supporting outside of the orphanages 56,039 children, making a total of 1[illegible],000 boys and girls now under the care of the Near East Relief."

Mr. Dodge considers the work of the Near East Relief one of the most stupendous undertakings of disinterested philanthropy the world has ever seen.

"In countries whose population totals more than 30,000,000 souls, American idealism exemplified by the work of the Near East Relief constitutes today a torch of enlightenment and an influence for peace throughout the whole Near East," he maintains. "Our American ideal of liberty, industry and helpfulness has brought us as a people happiness, prosperity and fulfillment. Out of the fullness of this heritage we are furnishing a faithful and undaunted Christian people the brotherly aid which will enable them to reach the same fulfillment that God has given us.

"It is an achievement of which every American may well be proud."

BANKER SAYS WISCONSIN IS QUITE A STATE

TELLS OF BENEFITS WHICH HAVE BEEN DERIVED THRU USE OF PURE BRED SEEDS; LOTS TO BE DEVELOPED

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 19—It is to be regretted that more of Wisconsin's people are not familiar with the wonderful agricultural and dairy state in which we live, says George D. Bartlett, secretary of the Wisconsin Bankers' Association. He says:

"The extended use of pure bred seed and grains, the increased yield and added value to the farmers of Wisconsin from merely five kinds of produce, oats, corn, barley, rye and potatoes have amounted to $110,000,000 since the Wisconsin bankers undertook their Pure Seed Grain contests seven years ago, in conjunction with Prof. Moore and his Pure Seed Experiment Association.

Big Cheese Producer

"More than one-half of all the cheese produced in the country is produced in Wisconsin factories; one-half of all the peas canned in the country are canned in Wisconsin factories; there are grown in Wisconsin farms one-third of all the cucumbers picked in the country; one-third of the cabbage crop of the country; Wisconsin provides one-sixth of the entire hemp acreage of the country; and 87,000 acres of alfalfa are now grown in the state—a product which is at the same time a soil fertilizer and an enemy of weeds. Live stock worth $125,000,000 are sold annually from Wisconsin farms and the dairy products of our state exceed those of any other state as they amount to over $300,000,000 annually, made possible by the 71,000 silos erected upon our farms.

More Land to Open

"When we take into consideration the wonderful products of Wisconsin farms and realize that there are still 100,000 more farms of 80 acres each waiting settlement and development, we can see the wonderful opportunity for publicity which ought to be disseminated and thus bring immediate immigration within our borders. Such a settlement upon our lands would materially care for, and solve, the great tax problems which are now confronting our state legislature.

"While Wisconsin farms are mortgaged in perhaps the same proportion as farms in other states, very few other states in the Union can point with pride to the fact that its farm products in one year would entirely pay off the entire principal and interest indebtedness upon all the farms in that state, as is the case in Wisconsin.

"During 1920, thru the co-operation of those interested in state development, over 3,000,000 pounds of dynamite and TNT were provided and used in our state. Silos and more convenient farm buildings and an essential feature of state development."

WILL REPEAT PAGEANT

The Ladies of the Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist church will repeat the pagent given Thursday evening, entitled "The Gift Supreme." The pagent presents a series of beautiful pictures developing the idea that is only as we give ourselves in service for others that we are real followers of the Christ who gave Himself for all. It culminates in the heart stirring appeal of the peoples who sit in darkness that we who know the Christ shall make it possible for them also to share in The Gift Supreme.

Stevens Point Farmer Glad Found Kozak

"I recently read of the hundreds of men and women living right here in Wisconsin, who got relief from their troubles by taking Kozak," said Nick Groshek, well known farmer of Route 1, Custer, Wis., near Stevens Point, prominent member of the Catholic church at Francher, Wis. "I had suffered terribly from heartburn, and gas on the stomach. In fact, my stomach became sore and often felt bloated and miserable. I decided to try Kozak. Soon I noticed a change. Instead of forming gas my food digested properly. The heartburn and soreness stopped and today all my troubles are ended. Kozak has no equal, in my opinion."

Armenian President Asks American Aid

Dr. H. Ohandjanian, Armenian Pres.

Erivan, Armenia: Dr. H. Ohandjanian, President of the Armenian Republic, has sent an urgent cablegram to Colonel V. Vickery, General Secretary of the Near East Relief, 1 Madison Ave., New York City, requesting immediate assistance to prevent the starvation of the Armenian people before the next harvest can be gathered. President Ohandjanian's message reads:

"Owing to hail, rain and field mice, the harvest in Armenia fell below expectations. Standing crop appeared well, but owing to poor seed, returns were not as good as was expected. Maximum returns 140,000 tons, only sufficient for eight months for one and a half million people. Food crisis critical and intensified by new Turkish invasion of Armenia. It is estimated that 100,000 peaceful inhabitants of Sarikamish and Kars region have been forced to renew the life of refugees and flee towards the interior of Armenia. There are also large numbers fleeing from Bolsheviks in Azerbaijan and Southern Russia, and coming to Armenia. Farmers, fearing famine, are unwilling to sell crops, thus leaving the cities foodless. In addition to the Armenian crops, ten thousand tons have been purchased from neighboring countries.

"In order to save Armenia it is necessary to secure flour from America, 50,000 tons, maximum requirement. In the name of the Armenian Government and the Armenian People, I beg that you use your wide influence in order that the Near East Relief may secure and ship the flour needed. I am sure that in this serious crisis the Near East Relief will not fail to continue its aid to Armenia in her struggle for existence.

"H. OHANDJANIAN,
"President of Armenia."

To Quench Thirst.

An invalid whose mouth becomes dry and parched during the night, or a fever patient, will find that an orange, cut into small pieces and placed within easy reach of the bed so that a piece may be held in the mouth from time to time, will be more beneficial than water, says Good Housekeeping. It has the added advantage that a patient can manage the pieces of orange more easily than he could a glass of water.

Walking on Snow.

With the snowshoe with its broad, latticed, available bottom, workable in walking over soft snow, the novice does not expect to develop much speed, says the American Forestry Magazine. The sport consists in walking on snow so soft that, without such aids, he would sink into it. Northern hunters in former times made their own shoes with hatchet and knife, and if leather thongs were not at hand the lattice was made of vines or twigs, which may be employed in winter as well as in summer.

HEART OF WISCONSIN NEWS

PORT EDWARDS NEPCOS TRIM NATIONAL GUARD

The Wisconsin Rapids National Guard basketball team and the Port Edwards Nepcos played a very exciting game at the Port Edwards Auditorium Saturday evening in which the Nepcos came out ahead.

The Port Edwards team was the aggressor from the start, it having started the scoring soon after the opening of the game. Domke, of the Nepcos, shot a fine field goal and then the hard fighting of the game started. Up until this juncture, the game had been one of much scrambling after the ball. Eight points were scored by the Nepcos during the first half. The visiting team did not score during the first half.

At the quiset of the second half, one could notice the change in the National Guard team. They seemed to be fighting harder and with the help of De Guerre, who substituted for R. Mathews, they started scoring. During this half the Guards made eleven points and the Nepcos five. The passing on both sides was a feature of the game and some of the getaways on both sides thrilled the spectators.

Tiekner and Domke were the stars for Port Edwards, although all played very well. DeGuerre and L. LeRoux played a shade the best on the Guards. The National Guards played fine together and their teamwork at times was some of the best ever witnessed at Port Edwards. The final score was 13 to 9, favor of the Nepcos.

The line-ups were as follows: National Guards, L. Le Roux and Millbrath, forwards; Smith, center; L. Matthews and R. Matthews, guards; De Guerre for R. Mathews in second half. Nepcos, Hines and Domke, forwards; L. LeRoux, center; Patrenets and Tiekno, guards.

Neil Brennan refereed the game.

There was a preliminary game between the Port Edwards Boy Scouts and the Wisconsin Rapids Cubs in which some very fast playing was seen. The Port Edwards team had the edge on the playing throughout the game.

The first half ended with the Scouts in the lead by a score of 10 and 2. During the second half the Cubs caught up on the Port Edwards boys in score, the game ending with the Scouts in the lead, 15 to 9.

The line-ups were as follows: Cubs, Collier and Searles, forwards; Searls, center; Pradotto and Hartnabeu, guards; Kleberg and Grieber substituted. Scouts, E. LeRoux and Hendricks, forwards; Pelot, center; Millard and Kayser, guards.

Pelot and E. LeRoux starred for Port Edwards. Searles and Collier did the best playing on the Cubs.

Neil Brennan refereed the game.

Big Cheese Producer

"More than one-half of all the cheese produced in the country is produced in Wisconsin factories; one-half of all the peas canned in the country are canned in Wisconsin factories; there are grown in Wisconsin farms one-third of all the cucumbers picked in the country; one-third of the cabbage crop of the country; Wisconsin provides one-sixth of the entire hemp acreage of the country; and 87,000 acres of alfalfa are now grown in the state—a product which is at the same time a soil fertilizer and an enemy of weeds. Live stock worth $125,000,000 are sold annually from Wisconsin farms and the dairy products of our state exceed those of any other state as they amount to over $300,000,000 annually, made possible by the 71,000 silos erected upon our farms.

More Land to Open

"When we take into consideration the wonderful products of Wisconsin farms and realize that there are still 100,000 more farms of 80 acres each waiting settlement and development, we can see the wonderful opportunity for publicity which ought to be disseminated and thus bring immediate immigration within our borders. Such a settlement upon our lands would materially care for, and solve, the great tax problems which are now confronting our state legislature.

"While Wisconsin farms are mortgaged in perhaps the same proportion as farms in other states, very few other states in the Union can point with pride to the fact that its farm products in one year would entirely pay off the entire principal and interest indebtedness upon all the farms in that state, as is the case in Wisconsin.

"During 1920, thru the co-operation of these interested in state development, over 3,000,000 pounds of dynamite and TNT were provided and used in our state. Silos and more convenient farm buildings are an essential feature of state development."

WILL REPEAT PAGEANT

The Ladies of the Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist church will repeat the pagent given Thursday evening, entitled "The Gift Supreme." The pagent presents a series of beautiful pictures developing the idea that is only as we give ourselves in service for others that we are real followers of the Christ who gave Himself for all. It culminates in the heart stirring appeal of the peoples who sit in darkness that we who know the Christ shall make it possible for them also to share in The Gift Supreme.

Stevens Point Farmer Glad Found Kozak

"I recently read of the hundreds of men and women living right here in Wisconsin, who got relief from their troubles by taking Kozak," said Nick Grushek, well known farmer of Route 1, Custer, Wis., near Stevens Point, prominent member of the Catholic church at Francher, Wis. "I had suffered terribly from heartburn, and gas on the stomach. In fact, my stomach became sore and often felt bloated and miserable. I decided to try Kozak. Soon I noticed a change. Instead of forming gas my food digested properly. The heartburn and soreness stopped and today all my troubles are ended. Kozak has no equal, in my opinion."

Kozak, the Master Medicine, sold by Samuel Church, exclusively; Amherst, Boynton & Son.

Kozak creates a healthy appetite, builds up the system, aids digestion and brings back color to the cheeks and the sparkle of health to the eyes. Advertisement.

Armenian President Asks American Aid

Dr. H. Ohandjanian, Armenian Pres.

Erivan, Armenia, Dr. H. Ohandjanian, President of the Armenian Republic, in urgent appeal to the people of the United States, through Vladimir Vedernikoff, general secretary of the New York Armenian Committee, New York City, appealing for immediate aid to prevent the starvation of the Armenian people before the next harvest can be gathered. President Ohandjanian's message reads:

"Owing to hail, rain and fog mildew, the harvest in Armenia fell below expectations. Standing crop appeared well, but owing to poor seed, returns were not as good as was expected. Maximum requirements 110,000 tons, only sufficient for eight months for one and a half million people. Food crisis created and intensified by new Turkish invasion of Armenia. It is estimated that 100,000 peaceful inhabitants of Sarikamish and Kars region have been forced to renew the life of refugees and flee towards the interior of Armenia. There are also large numbers fleeing from Bolsheviks in Azerbaijan and Southern Russia, and coming to Armenia. Farmers, fearing famine, are unwilling to sell crops, thus leaving the cities foodless. In addition to the Armenian crops, ten thousand tons have been purchased from neighboring countries.

"In order to save Armenia it is necessary to secure flour from America, 50,000 tons, maximum requirement. In the name of the Armenian Government and the Armenian People, I beg that you use your wide influence in order that the Near East Relief may secure and ship the flour needed. I am sure that in this serious crisis the Near East Relief will not fail to continue its aid to Armenia in her struggle for existence.

"H. OHANDJANIAN,
"President of Armenia."

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—While in the little French town of Vevay, where the "staid, proper spinster" who tells the story is spending a vacation, she is asked to allow a young girl, Claire de Ravenol, to be her companion back to the United States. Although forming an attachment to the girl, the heroine takes a dislike to Monsieur de Ravenol, Claire's father, and declines.

CHAPTER XII.—De Ravenol falls into the trap and believing the flat to be empty enters to make another search for the gems. They trap him and bind him securely. De Ravenol then asserts he is an agent of the emperor of Germany, to whom the diamonds belong, and was sent to the United States to recover them.

CHAPTER XIII.—Entry of the kaiser into the muddle considerably complicates matters, and the possessors of the diamonds suggest referring the whole matter to the state department at Washington. De Ravenol objects.

CHAPTER XIV.—Mrs. Delario affirms that the diamonds were presented to her as a "mystic sign of initiation" into a supreme spiritual body, and so convinces our heroine of her sincerity that she returns the jewels to their original possessor, hoping thus to be done with them.

CHAPTER XV.—Claire says she thought the smuggled box contained an important cipher message relating to her father. A telegram to Re Davenol causes him to leave at once; afterward he sends for Claire. He goes to Mrs. Delario, believing she has the diamonds, but she puts him off. Mrs. Delario again leaves the gems with the now indignant heroine and departs without any explanation. A new character enters the story.

CHAPTER XVI.—The Unknown admits he is seeking De Ravenol, and our heroine makes an appointment for next morning. Billy Rivers announces De Ravenol and Claire have disappeared. Mrs. Delario tells them Claire has been left with her. De Ravenol by a ruse gains entry into the flat.

"Certainly. I understand." He gave the door a little push as a hint to me. "But do you not see that you might furnish me with a valuable clue?" He gave the door a harder push, and as it clicked on the chain-bolt he repeated, "If you allow me to enter that we may discuss this in private—"

I thought I saw myself letting a strange man enter with all those diamonds loose in a box with pens! And at the thought of them I saw that this might be only another plot of monsieur's!

I looked at him in a way that made him think I was considering my responsibilities, and then I asked as casually as I could, "But at what time did she disappear?"

"Ah, that is the question—when?" he cried, giving a tragic—or what he meant to be tragic—gesture to show how utterly the girl had vanished.

And he stopped to consider what he should tell me next, and I, seeing no chance to catch a clue for myself, added, "If you are simply free-lancing in the case I should not feel justified in discussing her with you—but if her father is employing you—if it is he who has put the case in your hands—that is a different matter, and I see no objection to telling you all I know."

He took the bait, hook and sinker!

"It is her father who has placed the matter in my hands," he replied convincingly; and at the same time he gave the door a shove as if to say, "Now you must let me in!" and dropping his voice to a whisper: "You will understand also why the greatest secrecy must be maintained!"

"Oh, of course. Now, when did she disappear?"

I got this off in a tone to indicate that I was thawing out. Not lost on him! He answered with a quick but vague, "Shortly after landing."

"You don't say!" I exclaimed, wishing to seem shocked and trying to keep back a laugh at the way he'd given himself away. But the next moment I realized that the fellow could have no possible connection with monsieur.

It came over me with a rush that this was a plot against Claire herself! Was it to kidnap her and hold her for ransom? Her California grandfather, now dying, was reputed many times the millionaire. Or was this the counterplot of some other nation against Germany for the possession of Mexico?—an effort to strike at De Ravenol, the emperor's messenger, through his daughter and put a spoke in the treaty?

I experienced a positive shock as this situation burst on me. I must get rid of this detective immediately, yet not let him guess what I was now fairly certain of, so I told him with affected cordiality, "I see just how it is—and that you wish to keep this secret as long as possible. I'm sorry—but it isn't convenient for me to receive you at this moment."

"Can you make it this afternoon?" he asked.

"Not very well—unless you wish to meet a reporter from one of the big dailies." I gave him a look that said, "That's what I'm trying to avoid for you."

He started slightly and hastily begged me, "Do not let the press get hold of this! I have spoken to you in confidence—I felt I might trust you."

"Certainly. Tomorrow at nine will be safe I think. Shall I expect you?"

I saw he was about to demur at this, but the rumbling of the elevator, coming nearer and nearer, had attracted his attention. The top of the car showed up at our door.

"Nine," he whispered, giving me a signal to be silent; and with that he slipped noiselessly to the stairs—the way he had come up—and disappeared.

The car door opened and Billy jumped out. I hastily undid the chain-bolt and he bounded in with a "What do you think?" and dragged me along the hall, out of earshot of the door, and then cried in an excited whisper, "Your 'mossoo' has flew the coop!"

Billy flung his hat on the table and repeated his words—"Your 'mossoo' has flew the coop—do you hear?" for I had been too astonished to say anything when I heard them the first time.

"Gone—bag and baggage! Evaporated! Took a carriage and told the driver the Waldorf."

"Then he's not gone very far," I remarked, without thinking, only to have Billy ask scornfully:

"Do you suppose I haven't been there already? I tell you he's lit out for parts unknown—that's the size of it, and I want to know what for! He left the hotel at seven in the morning—seven, mind you, before anybody was out of bed. He hadn't registered at the Waldorf by eleven—and he hasn't registered at any of the other big hotels. I got a hunch he's got some new scheme on and there's no use looking for him in New York. Do you imagine he would go to Washington on his own hook—with his daughter and all—and lay the case before the president? I mean to lay a case before the president—trust little old 'mossoo' to tell only what he wants known!"

"Suppose he has!" I cried, and then I added, "That would be almost too good to be true."

"Yes—I feel that way—I kind-a don't seem to feel that he did—my hunch doesn't say he did. But say—I've been figuring it out coming up on the sub—your 'mossoo' is laying a new trap for you and Mrs. Delario. He knows one of you two women has got the diamonds—he knows it in his boots, no matter what you say—and anyway you have. He knows you've got 'em—that you're bound to keep 'em—and wouldn't dare sell or tell. See? That's where he's got you; and he knows you're both of you shaking in your boots."

"I'm shaking, all right—I've had my fill of diamonds!" I admitted bitterly.

"And that's how he argues. He's only got to give you a new scare of some sort—and wait. And I bet you, too, you get your scare inside an hour!"

"Perhaps I've had it already!" I cried, suddenly recollecting my mysterious detective, whom I had forgotten in this new development of affairs, and I told Billy the story. But when I came to my suspicions that it was Claire the man was after Billy flopped down all in a heap on the divan.

"Good Lord!" he gasped. "It might be!" and for some minutes he sat there, squeezing his hands and glaring at the door. Suddenly Mrs. Thing-down-stairs began rendering her Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" of a pig on ice, and Billy jumped up in frustration and paced the floor. I was glad of her performance—it was a gratuitous contribution to the safety of conversation in my own flat.

"Tell me again everything your detective man said," commanded Billy. "And you're sure he's a tec?"

"I'm not sure of anything," I returned. "I had nothing to go on but what he said and what I guessed. He may have been a fancy burglar—a literary burglar, after my last novel; such things have happened." I saw Billy's lip curl at this frivolous suggestion, but I ran on. "He may be a gentleman crook—someone on the steamer whom I didn't know but who noticed I had an interest in the girl and is using it now to get in here and map the grounds so he can come back and rob and murder me."

"Oh, don't joke," he begged disconsolately. "This is awfully serious. Why couldn't this man—you say you think he's a foreigner—why couldn't he be the emperor's follow-up? Now why?"

"He could."

"Say—that's what he is! And 'mossoo' got wind of him last night and scooted for the tall timbers! The emperor wouldn't just hand 'mossoo' a box of diamonds like that and tell him just to take 'em and present 'em with his compliments—they don't do things that way over here. He'd send a second man to see that the first man did his job according to contract. And why isn't this the man?"

It did look possible—though I couldn't still see why he had begun his acquaintance with me—telling me a lie about Claire. While I was wondering over it, Billy remarked, "Poor De Ravenol has got his troubles all right. He knows the old man's after him and he's lost the goods. Say, you can afford to pity him now."

A wave of utter despair swept over me. I know of nothing more unnerving than the facetious nonchalance of the young male in face of a serious situation. I was ready to weep. I was saved from it by the ringing of the front bell.

I put up the chain-bolt before I opened it—I had sense enough for that—and then I cried: "You!" and received a sharp, "Ssh! Let me in, quick."

It was Mrs. Delario. When I saw her you could have knocked me down with a feather. I let her in and whisked her into my bedroom and shut the door on us. My first thought was Billy—he half naturally looked down the hall when I went to the door—and I knew he'd guess immediately who it was; but though I had told her the part he had already played in our adventure she hadn't met him and I had the presence of mind not to spring him on her till I'd found out what she came for. She had caught sight of him and now spoke in a whisper.

"You can't guess what's happened!"

"What next!" I gasped, almost in a whisper.

"Monsieur has simply dumped Claire back on my hands and decamped—without a word of real explanation!"

"Oh, never!"

"It's what he's done! And I'm in the worst pickle! What does it all mean? He came last evening and told me he'd just seen you and you told him I had the diamonds—"

"What a lie!" I burst out involuntarily.

"And then this morning—before I'd even out of bed—this comes by a messenger." She had drawn out a letter from her bag; she took it out of the envelope and handed it to me, remarking at the same time, "There was fifty dollars in it." The letter read:

"Dear Madame Delario:

"I was unable to return according to promise because of telegraphic communication notifying me that my wife—Claire's mother—is probably ill with a fatal illness and I am leaving for California immediately. My child knows nothing of her mother's illness and the reason of my so sudden departure. I am concealing it from her by saying that it is diplomatic business which calls me away. It would be cruelty to subject her so sensitive nature to anxiety and shock of long journey when she could not hope to see her mother alive.

"I implore you in human kindness take pity on her once more and shelter her for a few days, keeping from her the knowledge of this calamity that threatens her. I shall communicate with you in a few days. My gratitude," etc.

"And Claire followed it in an hour!" Mrs. Delario whispered.

"Did he bring her?"

"No—he sent her in a carriage. Of course he didn't bring her! He didn't take any chances of my refusing to keep her for him."

"Poor child!" I exclaimed. "She was devoted to her mother—it will be a terrible blow to her."

Mrs. Delario sniffed at me—taking the letter from my hand and glancing at it before she answered: "You don't think for a minute there's anything the matter with Claire's mother, do you?"

"There isn't?"

"Why, of course not! . . . Oh, I know," she answered the question she must have read in my face. "Psychometrized this note as soon as I got it. That man can't deceive me—I felt 'scheme' and 'plot' all over it."

She held it a moment in a testing sort of way, running her fingers back and forth over it, then placed it in my hand, asking: "Can't you feel the occult influences?" and looked as if she expected me to reply that I could feel the occult influences, plain as anything. Which I couldn't. She seemed disappointed and put the letter into its envelope and that into her hand-bag, remarking: "It's part of a spell he's working. I haven't made out the rest of it—I'm not clear on it yet, though I know it's something—terrible."

"And you think he didn't go to California?"

"I'm sure he didn't—I can't see a journey for him—I mean an actual journey. There are journeys ahead for him—he travels a great deal—but I don't see anything for today—nor tomorrow; there's nothing like that. But I do get the word—emphatically—'hiding.' That doesn't help us very much for us, if he is!"

"Or for Claire!"

"No. But please don't think I'm not willing to do all I can for the child for her own sake. But I have her thrust on me in this mysterious way—"

She broke off and looked at me hopelessly and I finished for her: "He's up to it."

"Exactly! He nearly [illegible] And that isn't all—I can't [illegible] on that; there's a [illegible] on the scene—I'm more [illegible] about him than about anything else."

"A new one? When did he disappear?"

"Last night—just after I got back from here and was waiting for monsieur; so I let him in—" and she described the very man who had just been to see me, and who was either a thief or Baron von Follow-up for the Emperor William, as Billy had called him. He had reached Mrs. Delario as he had me, through Claire, saying she had disappeared.

"And what's your impression of this new man?" I asked. I was beginning to take some little stock in her impressions, partly because they coincided with my own; partly because I was clutching at anything that might help.

"Trouble—trouble for monsieur. I get the word clairaudiently. You see, I'm so upset—why, my dear, it isn't any more possible for me to do my work—get my readings right—in an atmosphere of confusion—and fear and anxiety—than it is for you to do your work—write, and compose beautiful things. You couldn't, could you? You couldn't write, if you were all upset?"

I admitted I shouldn't expect to produce much of my own line of goods under like circumstances; and having won this from me, she laid her hand on my arm in an appealing way and said: "It's why I came to you—I didn't know what else to do or where to turn for advice. What am I to do about Claire?"

I was sure I didn't know, but I asked some trite question about how she seemed to be taking it.

"The poor child went into hysterics the minute she got in the house! I had to put her to bed. I'm afraid she's in for a sickness—a nervous breakdown."

"But the diamonds?" said I, meaning to test her attitude, since she'd had a chance to think over what I'd told her about monsieur's claims on them and particularly as he'd gone to her himself: "Will you take them home with you?"

She recoiled from me. "I can't—now—how can I?" she gasped. "Oh, you're going to help me, aren't you?"

She had caught hold of me and looked positively frightened as she spoke, glancing over her shoulder at the door to see that it was tight shut and that we could not be overheard.

"I depend on you—I trust you. If I lose those diamonds—oh, you can't guess what I shall lose! I wouldn't lie to you—I tell you that man De Ravenol is a thief. I get it clairaudiently every time he comes near me. I see the word, as I told you yesterday, over his head in white letters. My spirit guides wouldn't give it to me if it weren't true."

There was both scorn and appeal in her tone. I saw the moment was not ripe for a discussion of the Tibetan mahatma question. Nor did I let her renewed expressions of regret go by me and her children out of boys in the present emergencies lessen my pity. I couldn't think of anything suitable to say, she came out: "Won't you consent to help me, will you?—now that I need you worse than ever!"

And what could I say but "Yes—I'll stand by you through it"? Heavens fall!" and now for what now? Carried by line of conduct I was mentally giving myself to? I didn't try to think. I told her Billy was here and [illegible] she must [illegible]—particularly since I'd been to the hotel and was all wrought up over Claire's mysterious departure. Mrs. Delario demurred, but I overruled her and presented Billy.

Billy's relief and joy at the rediscovery of Claire were quite touchingly amusing and he made himself correspondingly agreeable to Claire's chaperon. He seemed conveniently to forget his criticism of a couple of hours ago that said chaperon was crazy. The only point we any of us attempted to elucidate was the new man's connection with the case—which we felt was somehow the key to monsieur's sudden disappearance—and I was not a little surprised to hear Billy ask her seriously: "Can't you get something about him, clairvoyantly?"

She told him she couldn't at the moment—the conditions weren't right—she was too worried—too confused.

"Of course," he agreed. "It's like everything else—takes your best powers."

TALK CHANGE IN POTATO GRADES

DIVISION OF MARKETS SUGGESTS FANCY GRADE AND STANDARD FOR FIRST CHOICE; NAME POTATO COMMITTEE

Marinette, Wis., Feb. 16—As a result of the potato marketing conference at the Get-Together conference at Madison, the Wisconsin division of markets probably will recommend the federation of all cooperative potato marketing organizations in the state, and a radical change in Wisconsin potato standards.

Decide Later

The discussion, which arrived at no definite result, was led by E. C. Pommerening, president of the Wisconsin society of Equity, who favored co-operative marketing by a central body representing the federated associations.

tive agencies of the state; and E. P. Miller, who argued for local co-operation marketing thru a privately managed selling organization. It was decided that a committee meet and attempt to formulate a plan, to be reported in some manner to be decided later to the growers of the state.

This committee, consisting of W. P. Jones of the division of markets; H. D. Campbell, Society of Equity; J. G. Milward, secretary of the Wisconsin potato growers association; W. W. Clark county agent at Stevens Point; Assistant Secretary Wright, state farm bureau, and R. J. Rasmussen, manager of the N. W. Produce Co., of Waupaca, have framed this plan:

May Change Grades

The division of markets will report out a plan for federating the co-operative potato marketing agencies of the state, this to have charge of the sale of Wisconsin potatoes for the entire state. Because of dissatisfaction with present potato standards, the present No. 1 grade will be divided into Wisconsin Fancy, with a two per cent of culls allowed, and Wisconsin Standard with 10 per cent. No. 2 grade in the old standards will be continued. Badger Brand, the former extra-fancy grade will be discontinued. It is expected another state potato conference will be called when the division of markets is ready to announce its federated marketing plan.

FORMER TOWNLEY AIDE CHARGED WITH PERJURY

Bismarck N. D.—J. W. Brinton, formerly private secretary to A. Townley, president of the National Nonpartisan league, was arrested here on a charge of perjury, in connection with his recent testimony before the senate committee investigating the audit of the Bank of North Dakota. The warrant was issued on complaint of F. X. Catho, director-general of the Bank of North Dakota, who was charged in testimony by Brinton with embezzlement of the state bank's funds.

A new character enters the story.

CHAPTER XVI.—The Unknown admits he is seeking De Ravenol, and our heroine makes an appointment for next morning. Billy Rivers announces De Ravenol and Claire have disappeared. Mrs. Delario tells them Claire has been left with her. De Ravenol by a ruse gains entry into the flat.

"Certainly. I understand." He gave the door a little push as a hint to me. "But do you not see that you . . . . . might furnish me with a valuable clue?" He gave the door a harder push, and as it clicked on the chain-bolt he repeated, "If you allow me to enter that we may discuss this in private—"

I thought I saw myself letting a strange man enter with all those diamonds loose in a box with pens! And at the thought of them I saw that this might be only another plot of monsieur's!

I looked at him in a way that made him think I was considering my responsibilities, and then I asked as casually as I could, "But at what time did she disappear?"

"Ah, that is the question—when?" he cried, giving a tragic—or what he meant to be tragic—gesture to show how utterly the girl had vanished.

And he stopped to consider what he should tell me next, and I, seeing no chance to catch a clue for myself, added, "If you are simply free-lancing in the case I should not feel justified in discussing her with you—but if her father is employing you—if it is he who has put the case in your hands—that is a different matter, and I see no objection to telling you all I know."

He took the bait, hook and sinker!

"It is her father who has placed the matter in my hands," he replied convincingly; and at the same time he gave the door a shove as if to say, "Now you must let me in!" and dropping his voice to a whisper: "You will understand also why the greatest secrecy must be maintained!"

"Oh, of course. Now, when did she disappear?"

I got this off in a tone to indicate that I was thawing out. Not lost on him! He answered with a quick but vague, "Shortly after landing."

"You don't say!" I exclaimed, wishing to seem shocked and trying to keep back a laugh at the way he'd given himself away. But the next moment I realized that the fellow could have no possible connection with monsieur.

It came over me with a rush that this was a plot against Claire herself! Was it to kidnap her and hold her for ransom? Her California grandfather, now dying, was reputed many times the millionaire. Or was this the counterplot of some other nation against Germany for the possession of Mexico?—an effort to strike at De Ravenol, the emperor's messenger, through his daughter and put a spoke in the treaty?

I experienced a positive shock as this situation burst on me. I must get rid of this detective immediately, yet not let him guess what I was now fairly certain of, so I told him with affected cordiality, "I see just how it is—and that you wish to keep this secret as long as possible. I'm sorry—but it isn't convenient for me to receive you at this moment."

"Can you make it this afternoon?" he asked.

"Not very well—unless you wish to meet a reporter from one of the big dailies." I gave him a look that said, "That's what I'm trying to avoid for you."

He started slightly and hastily begged me, "Do not let the press get hold of this! I have spoken to you in confidence—I felt I might trust you."

"Certainly. Tomorrow at nine will be safe I think. Shall I expect you?"

I saw he was about to demur at this, but the rumbling of the elevator, coming nearer and nearer, had attracted his attention. The top of the car showed up at our door.

"Nine," he whispered, giving me a signal to be silent; and with that he slipped noiselessly to the stairs—the way he had come up—and disappeared.

The car door opened and Billy jumped out. I hastily undid the chain-bolt and he bounded in with a "What do you think?" and dragged me along the hall, out of earshot of the door, and then cried in an excited whisper: "Your 'mossoo' has flew the coop!"

"Your 'Mossoo' Has Flew the Coop."

Billy flung his hat on the table and repeated his words—"Your 'mossoo' has flew the coop—do you hear?" for I had been too astonished to say anything when I heard them the first time.

"Gone—bag and baggage! Evaporated! Took a carriage and told the driver the Waldorf."

"Then he's not gone very far," I remarked, without thinking, only to have Billy ask scornfully:

"Do you suppose I haven't been there already? I tell you he's lit out for parts unknown—that's the size of it, and I want to know what for! He left the hotel at seven in the morning—seven, mind you, before anybody was out of bed. He hadn't registered at the Waldorf by eleven—and he hasn't registered at any of the other big hotels. I got a hunch he's got some new scheme on and there's no use looking for him in New York. Do you imagine he would go to Washington on his own hook—with his daughter and all—and lay the case before the president? I mean to lay a case before the president—trust little old 'mossoo' to tell only what he wants known!"

"Suppose he has!" I cried, and then I added, "That would be almost too good to be true."

"Yes—I feel that way—I kind-a don't seem to feel that he did—my hunch doesn't say he did. But say—I've been figuring it out coming up on the sub—your 'mossoo' is laying a new trap for you and Mrs. Delario. He knows one of you two women has got the diamonds—he knows it in his boots, no matter what you say—and anyway you have. He knows you've got 'em—that you're bound to keep 'em—and wouldn't dare sell or tell. See? That's where he's got you; and he knows you're both of you shaking in your boots."

"I'm shaking, all right—I've had my fill of diamonds!" I admitted bitterly.

"And that's how he argues. He's only got to give you a new scare of some sort—and wait. And I bet you, too, you get your scare inside an hour!"

"Perhaps I've had it already!" I cried, suddenly recollecting my mysterious detective, whom I had forgotten in this new development of affairs, and I told Billy the story. But when I came to my suspicions that it was Claire the man was after Billy flopped down all in a heap on the divan.

"Good Lord!" he gasped. "It might be!" and for some minutes he sat there, squeezing his hands and glaring at the floor. Suddenly Mrs. Thingdown-stairs began rendering her Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" of a pig on ice, and Billy jumped up in irritation and paced the floor. I was glad of her performance—it was a gratuitous contribution to the safety of conversation in my own flat.

"Tell me again everything your detective man said," commanded Billy. "And you're sure he's a tec.?"

"I'm not sure of anything," I returned. "I had nothing to go on but what he said and what I guessed. He may have been a fancy burglar—a literary burglar, after my last novel; such things have happened." I saw Billy's lip curl at this frivolous suggestion, but I ran on. "He may be a gentleman crook—someone on the steamer whom I didn't know but who noticed I had an interest in the girl and is using it now to get in here and map the grounds so he can come back and rob and murder me."

"Oh, don't joke," he begged disconsolately. "This is awfully serious. Why couldn't this man—you say you think he's a foreigner—why couldn't he be the emperor's follow-up? Now why?"

"He could."

"Say—that's what he is! And 'mossoo' got wind of this last night and scooted for the tall timbers! The emperor wouldn't just hand 'mossoo' a box of diamonds like that and tell him just to take 'em and present 'em with his compliments—they don't do things that way over here. He'd send a second man to see that the first man did his job according to contract. And why isn't this the man?"

It did look possible—though I couldn't still see why he had begun his acquaintance with me—telling me a lie about Claire. While I was wondering over it, Billy remarked, "Poor De Ravenol has got his troubles all right. He knows the old man's after him and he's lost the goods. Say, you can afford to pity him now."

A wave of utter despair swept over me. I know of nothing more unhinging than the facetious nonchalance of the young male in face of a serious situation. I was ready to weep. I was saved from it by the ringing of the front bell.

I put up the chain-bolt before I opened it—I had sense enough for that—and then I cried: "You!" and received a sharp, "Sch! Let me in, quick."

It was Mrs. Delario. When I saw her, you could have knocked me down with a feather. I let her in and whisked her into my bedroom and shut the door on us. My first thought was Billy—he had naturally looked down the hall when I went to the door—and I knew he'd guess immediately who it was; but though I had told her the part he had already played in our adventure she hadn't met him and I had the presence of mind not to spring him on her till I'd found out what she came for. She had caught sight of him and now spoke in a whisper.

"You can't guess what's happened!"

"What next?" I gasped, almost in a whisper.

"Monsieur has simply dumped Claire back on my hands and decamped—without a word of real explanation!"

"Oh, never!"

"It's what he's done! And I'm in the worst pickle! What does it all mean? He came last evening and told me he'd just seen you and you told him I had the diamonds—"

"What a lie!" I burst out involuntarily.

"And then this morning—before I'm even out of bed—this comes by a messenger." She had drawn out a letter from her bag; she took it out of the envelope and handed it to me, remarking at the same time, "There was fifty dollars in it." The letter read:

"Dear Madame Delario:

"I was unable to return according to promise because of telegraphic communication notifying me that my wife—Claire's mother—is probably ill with a fatal illness and I am leaving for California immediately. My child knows nothing of her mother's illness and the reason of my so sudden departure. I am concealing it from her by saying that it is diplomatic business which calls me away. It would be cruelty to subject her so sensitive nature to anxiety and shock of long journey when she could not hope to see her mother alive.

"I implore you in human kindness take pity on her once more and shelter her for a few days, keeping from her the knowledge of this calamity that threatens her. I shall communicate with you in a few days. My gratitude," etc.

"And Claire followed it in an hour!" Mrs. Delario whispered.

"Did he bring her?"

"No—he sent her in a carriage. Of course he didn't bring her! He didn't take any chances of my refusing to keep her for him."

"Poor child!" I exclaimed. "She was devoted to her mother—it will be a terrible blow to her."

Mrs. Delario sniffed at me—taking the letter from my hand and glancing at it before she answered: "You don't think for a minute there's anything the matter with Claire's mother, do you?"

"There isn't?"

"Why, of course not! . . . Oh, I know," she answered the question she must have read in my face. "I psychometrized this note as soon as I got it. That man can't deceive me. I feel 'scheme' and 'plot' all over it."

She held it a moment in a testing sort of way, running her fingers back and forth over it, then placed it in my hand, asking: "Can't you feel the occult influences?" and looked as if she expected me to reply that I could feel the occult influences, plain as anything. Which I couldn't. She seemed disappointed and put the letter into its envelope and that into her handbag, remarking: "It's part of a scheme he's working. I haven't made out the rest of it—I'm not clear on it yet, though I know it's something—tricky."

"And you think he didn't go to California?"

"I'm sure he didn't—I can't see a journey for him—I mean an immediate journey. There are journeys all around him—he travels a great deal—but I don't see anything for today—for tomorrow; there's nothing like that near. But I do get the word—clairaudiently—'Hiding.' That doesn't help things very much for us, if he is!"

"Or for Claire!"

"No. But please don't think I'm not willing to do all I can for the child for her own sake. I'm having her thrust on me in this mysterious way—"

She broke off and looked at me helplessly and I finished for her: "Has upset you."

"Terribly! I'm nearly distracted! And that isn't all—I mean Claire being thrust on me; there's a reason on the score—I'm more troubled about him than almost anything else."

"A new man? When did he appear?"

"Last night—just after I got back from here and was waiting for monsieur; so I let him in—" and she described the very man who had just been to see me, and who was either a thief or Baron von Follow-up for the Emperor William, as Billy had called him. He had reached Mrs. Delario as he had me, through Claire, saying she had disappeared.

"And what's your impression of this new man?" I asked. I was beginning to take some little stock in her impressions, partly because they coincided with my own; partly because I was clutching at anything that might help.

"Trouble—trouble for monsieur. I get the word clairaudiently. You see, I'm so upset—why, my dear, it isn't any more possible for me to do my work—get my readings right—in an atmosphere of confusion—and fear and anxiety—than it is for you to do your work—write, and compose beautiful things. You couldn't, could you? You couldn't write, if you were all upset?"

I admitted I shouldn't expect to produce much of my own line of goods under like circumstances; and having won this from me, she laid her hand on my arm in an appealing way and said: "It's why I came to you—I didn't know what else to do or where to turn for advice. What am I to do about Claire?"

I was sure I didn't know, but I asked some trite question about how she seemed to be taking it.

"The poor child went into hysterics the minute she got in the house! I had to put her to bed. I'm afraid she's in for a sickness—a nervous breakdown."

"But the diamonds?" said I, meaning to test her attitude, since she'd had a chance to think over what I'd told her about monsieur's claims on them and particularly as he'd gone to her himself: "Will you take them home with you?"

She recoiled from me. "I can't—now—how can I?" she gasped. "Oh, you're going to help me, aren't you?"

She had caught hold of me and looked positively frightened as she spoke, glancing over her shoulder at the door to see that it was tight shut and that we could not be overheard.

"I depend on you—I trust you. If I lose those diamonds—oh, you can't guess what I shall lose! I wouldn't lie to you—I tell you that man De Ravenol is a thief. I get it clairaudiently every time he comes near me. I see the word, as I told you yesterday, over his head in waite letters. My spirit guides wouldn't give it to me if it weren't true."

There was both scorn and appeal in her tone. I saw the moment was not ripe for a discussion of the Tibetan mahatma question. Nor did her renewed expressions of confidence in me and her obvious need of help in the present difficulties lessen the complications that now entangled me. Before I could think of anything suitable to say, she burst out: "You'll not desert me, will you?—now that I need you worse than ever!"

And what could I say but, "No—I'll stand by you though the heavens fall!" and wonder what new bizarre line of conduct I was committing myself to? I didn't try to think, but told her Billy was here and suggested that she meet him—particularly since he'd been to the hotel and was all wrought up over Claire's mysterious departure. Mrs. Delario demurred, but I overruled her and presented Billy.

Billy's relief and joy at the rediscovery of Claire were quite touchingly amusing and he made himself correspondingly agreeable to Claire's chaperon. He seemed conveniently to forget his dictum of a couple of hours ago that said chaperon was crazy. The only point we any of us attempted to elucidate was the new man's connection with the case—which we felt was somehow the key to monsieur's sudden disappearance—and I was not a little surprised to hear Billy ask her seriously: "Can't you get something about him, clairvoyantly?"

She told him she couldn't at the moment—the conditions weren't right—she was too worried—too confused.

"Of course," he agreed. "It's like everything else—takes your best powers."

TALK CHANGE IN POTATO GRADES

DIVISION OF MARKETS SUGGESTS FANCY GRADE AND STANDARD FOR FIRST CHOICE; NAME POTATO COMMITTEE

Marinette, Wis., Feb. 16—As a result of the potato marketing conference at the Get-Together conference at Madison, the Wisconsin division of markets probably will recommend the federation of all cooperative potato marketing organizations in the state, and a radical change in Wisconsin potato standards.

Decide Later

The discussion, which arrived at no definite result, was led by E. C. Pentecost, president of the Wisconsin Society of Equity, who favored co-operative marketing by a central body representing the federated co-operative agencies of the state; and E. P. Miller, who argued for local co-operation marketing thru a privately managed selling organization. It was decided that a committee meet and attempt to formulate a plan, to be reported in some manner to be decided later to the growers of the state.

This committee, consisting of W. P. Jones of the division of markets; H. D. Campbell, Society of Equity; J. G. Milward, secretary of the Wisconsin potato growers association; W. W. Clark county agent at Stevens Point; Assistant Secretary Wright, state farm bureau, and R. J. Rasmussen, manager of the N. W. Produce Co., of Waupaca, have framed this plan:

May Change Grades

The division of markets will report out a plan for federating the co-operative potato marketing agencies of the state, this to have charge of the sale of Wisconsin potatoes for the entire state. Because of dissatisfaction with present potato standards, the present No. 1 grade will be divided into Wisconsin Fancy, with a two per cent of culls allowed, and Wisconsin Standard with 10 per cent. No. 2 grade in the old standards will be continued. Badger Brand, the former extra-fancy grade will be discontinued. It is expected another state potato conference will be called when the division of markets is ready to announce its federated marketing plan.

FORMER TOWNLEY AIDE CHARGED WITH PERJURY

Bismarck N. D.—J. W. Brinton, formerly private secretary to A. C. Townley, president of the National Nonpartisan league, was arrested here on a charge of perjury, in connection with his recent testimony before the senate committee investigating the audit of the Bank of North Dakota. The warrant was issued on complaint of F. X. Catho, director-general of the Bank of North Dakota, who was charged in testimony by Brinton with embezzlement of the state bank's funds.
